In The Congo

Rescue Work Is Wound Up

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Belgium and the United States wound up their five-day rescue operation in the Congo Saturday after delivering more than 2,000 white hostages from the murderous anger of Christophe Gbenye's rebels.

The complete death toll was not certain, but it was known that at least 97 whites and perhaps hundreds of antirebel Congolese perished in the rebels' blood bath.

Unconfirmed refugee reports of 45 other whites massacred in the northeast Congo could raise the total to 142.

Among the dead were three American missionaries.

In the dramatic airborne rescue, about 2,000 whites held hostage by the rebels were flown out from Stanleyville and Paulis. The rebels had sworn to kill all white hostages, but the paratroopers struck too fast.

But as Belgian paratroopers in U.S. planes pulled out of the northeast Congo, at least 400 to 500 foreign nationals, a few of them Americans, were still believed to be in the rebel zone. There was fear for their lives.

Paulis, 250 miles northeast of Stanleyville, was left undefended and rallying leftist rebels could easily retake it. Stanleyville, however, was held by the Congolese army with its white officers who helped to seize the former rebel capital Tuesday.

The Belgian paratroopers flew back to Kamina in Katanga Province, their jumping of place for the drops at Stanleyville Tuesday and at Paulis two days later. At least one paratrooper was killed and three suffered broken legs in the jumps.

The Belgians are expected to be back in Belgium by next Wednesday, flying in the U.S. C130 transport planes that brought them to the Congo by way of Britain's Ascension Island in the Atlantic.

They are due to leave Kamina, the big military base, Sunday. U.S. Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley and Belgian Ambassador Count Charles Kerchove flew to Kamina to congratulate the paratroopers and the U.S. airmen for their courage on the rescue mission. U.S. planes came under rebel fire both at Stanleyville and Paulis and several were hit.

In the wake of the rescue operation, members of a special commission on the Congo meeting in Nairobi, Kenya, urged an emergency summit meeting of African leaders in December to deal with the Congo problem.

Most African nations are sympathetic to the rebel regime of Gbeyne, who was reported to have arrived in Equatorial Sudan. Red China, the Soviet Union and other Communist nations also are sympathetic to Gbenye.

Holiday Deaths Climb Up

Snow And Rain Over Country Add To Traffic Hazards

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deaths on the nation's highways continued to mount Saturday, as the long holiday weekend neared the end of its third day.

Snow and rain over a widespread area added to the traffic hazards.

Since the start of the four-day Thanksgiving weekend count by The Associated Press at 6 p.m. local time Wednesday, 379 persons have perished in accidents on the nation's highways and streets. The 102-hour period ends at midnight Sunday.

Although the frequency of fatal accidents ran unusually high Thanksgiving night, the death toll appeared to be running about a normal rate Friday and Saturday.

The Associated Press has kept records of Thanksgiving weekend traffic fatalities for the last six years. The lowest of these four-day holiday death counts was 442 in 1960. The high was 543 last year.

The average daily toll in the first nine months of 1964 was 126, according to the records of the National Safety Council. On Thanksgiving about 150 persons were killed in automobile accidents, compared to approximately 110 Friday.

The National Safety Council, which makes statistical studies of traffic accident records for some holidays, does not do so for the Thanksgiving weekend. The council said the period does not involve much extra long-distance travel, except for Thanksgiving Day.

For comparative purposes The Associated Press made a survey of a nonholiday weekend of 102 hours, from Nov. 11 to Nov. 15. There were 468 traffic fatalities.

Ex-Convicts Arraigned

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Two ex-convicts were arraigned Saturday on first degree robbery charges stemming from a $464 grocery store holdup more than nine years ago.

Jerome A. Nelson, 36, Hot Springs, Ark. and Raymond Nolan, 39, Pittsburgh, Pa., were returned here from California on a governor's warrant earlier this week. At the time of the holdup they were escapees from the San Quentin, Calif. prison farm.

Neither was able to post bond of $5,000.

7,000 Delegates Are Expected At NFO Meet

CORNING, Iowa (AP)—More than 7,000 delegates are expected to attend the annual meeting of the National Farmers Organization at Minneapolis next Wednesday and Thursday, president Oren Lee Staley said Saturday.

Staley said he will make his "state of affairs" speech Wednesday, when progress reports also will be given. Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman is scheduled to address the convention Wednesday night.

Election of officers will be held Thursday. Staley said he plans to seek another term. He has been president since 1955, a few months after the NFO was founded.

Mariner 4 Off On Mars Expedition

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — An interplanetary spaceship named Mariner 4 hurtled toward Mars on a photographic and scientific expedition Saturday and the flight control center reported it was on a course that would enable it to pass close to the red planet next July 14 as planned.

Although the gold and gleaming robot successfully executed early maneuvers, it still must clear several challenging hurdles and survive for a record 7½ months in the hostile environment of space before achieving its goal of Martin exploration.

Mariner 4, packing a camera and a sparkling array of scientific instruments, rocketed away from Cape Kennedy atop a towering Atlas-Agena booster which surged skyward at 9:22 a.m. EST after a perfect countdown.

More than seven hours later, after carefully calculating tracking information on rocket and spacecraft performance, project officials reported the 574-pound craft had been injected into a interplanetary trajectory which, if continued, would miss Mars by about 200,000 miles. They said this miss distance was well within the million-mile correction capability of a small steering motor aboard the streaking vehicle.

Mariner's project director, Jack James, said that between two and 10 days after launching, when computers have figured the course precisely, a station at Goldstone, Calif., is to send a radio signal to ignite the steering motor for the proper amount of time to swing Mariner 4 onto a path which would take it within 8,600 miles of Mars. The motor is capable of being fired again later for additional course refinement.

James said satisfactory data could be obtained if the mechanical explorer came within 54,000 miles of the target planet.

At the time of the miss-distance announcement, Mariner 4 was nearly 60,000 miles from earth on its outward journey. It had been injected into space at a speed of 25,598 miles an hour, but had slowed as intended to 9,547 miles as it darted farther from its home planet.

The space agency was hopeful that Mariner 4 would succeed where a twin spacecraft, Mariner 3, failed earlier this month because of structural failure of a protective shroud. The craft represents the last U. S. opportunity to probe Mars for two years.

The spacecraft was to zip across 325 million miles of space before its brief encounter with the planet, which many astronomers believe is inhabited by a basic form of life such as moss-like vegetation.

Survey Of Demand For Jobs In KC Area

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — How much demand is there for jobs in the six - county Missouri - Kansas area of metropolitan Kansas City?

The two state division of employment security are going to find out in a pilot survey during December. The Kansas City area is one of 16 in the nation where job vacancies will be studied.

LeRoy Schantz, Missouri director, and M. W. Buffon, Kansas director, announced the survey Saturday. It will be conducted in Jackson, Cass, Clay and Platte counties in Missouri and Johnson and Wyandotte countes in Kansas.

Most of the survey will be conducted by questionnaires mailed to employers.

Asian, African Students Attack Moscow Embassies

In Destructive Protest Of Actions In The Congo

MOSCOW (AP) — Mobs of Asian and African students attacked the U. S., Belgian, British and Congolese embassies Saturday in a destructive protest demonstration against Western actions in the Congo.

About 500 to 800 students from Moscow's Lumumba University smashed windows in all four embassies, destroyed two American-owned automobiles and roughed up Western spectators.

A few demonstrators broke into the Congolese ambassador's study and threw documents and office equipment into the courtyard.

All four embassies fired off sharp protests to the foreign ministry. They demanded payment for damages.

Walter J. Stoessel Jr., ranking U.S. diplomat in Ambassador Foy D. Kohler's absence complained that police protection had been inadequate.

He laid responsibility for the students' destructive spree squarely on the Russians, protesting "the tendentious, one-sided treatment by the Soviet press of developments in the Congo which tended to incite people to violence."

The Soviet public has not been told that missionaries and other white persons in the Congo were killed by rebel forces. The official Communist contention is that the Western explanation of having to send paratroopers for humanitarian purposes was a pretext to put down a national liberation movement.

The three-hour demonstration ranged through downtown Moscow in one of the most violent outbreaks witnesses by Western residents here.

A student leader told Western newsmen that Soviet officials at first denied the students permission to hold the demonstration. It was finally granted by Ministry of Higher Education officials Friday after strong pressure from the foreign students, he said.

Most of the mob consisted of Africans and Asians with a sprinkling of Russing Young Communist League leaders among them.

Screaming curses and anti-Western slogans, they surged down broad Tchaikovsky Boulevard outside the U.S. embassy shortly after 11 a.m.

A thin cordon of 150 policemen immediately gave way before the crowd which hurled sticks, stones and bottles of red and green ink at the tightly buttoned-up embassy.

Almost all the windows on the lower floors were smashed.

Assault Charge In Shooting Of Springfield Man

Police filed a city charge of assult with a deadly weapon against a Sedalia man Friday afternoon in connection with the wounding of a Springfield man here Thursday night.

Kenneth Allen, 34, 1002 South Murray, who had been held over night in the city jail, was released on $200 signed bond for appearance in Police Court before Judge Lawrence Englund on Dec. 14.

Allen is charged with wounding James E. Harper, 40, Springfield, about 6:35 p.m. Thursday night at 1906 South Washington, the home of Allen's parents. Harper was married to Allen's sister, Caroline, in Nowata, Okla. on Tuesday morning and the couple had just arrived in Sedalia shortly before the shooting incident. Harper was wounded in the groin with a blast from a .410 shotgun, but is reported in satisfactory condition at Bothwell Hospital.

The city assault charge against Allen is a misdemeanor and the maximum penalty is three months in jail a $100 fine or both.

Plane To Museum

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—A Messerschmitt 163B, of the type that became the world's first operational jet fighter in the closing days of World War II, is being assigned a permanent berth in the aviation section of Munich's Deutsches Museum. Since the war it has been in the hands of the British, who captured it and now have agreed to let it go.

Payoff Is Subject Of Hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Rules Committee opens public hearings Tuesday on a political payoff charge that Republicans sought to build into a major issue in the presidential election.

The three central figures in the investigation are Bobby G. Baker, former secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority; Matthew J. McCloskey, once ambassador to Ireland and a Democratic fund raiser; and Don B. Reynolds, a local insurance agent.

The issue the committee will probe:

Was there a $35,000 overpayment by Philadelphia contractor McCloskey on a performance bond in his company's construction of the $1.7 million D.C. Stadium?

McCloskey has denied it.

Did $25,000 of the alleged overpayment channel through Baker to the Kennedy-Johnson campaign fund of 1960?

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., quoted Reynolds as saying the $25,000 did funnel through Baker into the campaign fund. In making the charge, Williams exhibited a copy of a check for $109,205.60 from McCloskey's company to Reynolds and claimed this compared to $73,631.28 actually owed for the premium and commission on the performance bond.

Williams called this a political payoff or kickback in a speech on the Senate floor last Sept. 1.

The contract for the D.C. Stadium was signed during the administration of Republican President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Williams' accusation touched off a political furor; brought an order for an FBI investigation from President Johnson, and reopened the once-closed Senate investigation into the outside activities of Baker.

Republican presidential candidate Barry Goldwater used Baker as a campaign issue and repeatedly asserted a "White

LBJ Foresees No Change In Policy

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson cautioned Saturday against any policy of "narrow national self-interest" within the Atlantic Alliance, and foresaw no dramatic change in U. S. policy in South Viet Nam.

In discussing the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Johnson made no direct reference to President Charles de Gaulle of France, who is opposed to the proposed multilateral naval force.

But, in an apparent indirect reference to the French president, Johnson told a news conference on the front lawn of his ranch near here: "The United States sees no safe future for ourselves and none for any other Atlantic nation in a policy of narrow national self-interest.

"One of the great aspirations of the Atlantic community is the aspiration toward growing unity among the free peoples of Europe. No nation on either side of the Atlantic has done more to support this purpose than the United States. This support will continue."

Asked whether expansion of the Viet Nam war into Laos or North Viet Nam is a "live possibility at this time," Johnson replied: "I anticipate that there will be no dramatic announcement to come out of these meetings except in the form of your speculations."

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, U. S. embassador to South Viet Nam, is home for high-level conferences and will meet with Johnson in Washington on Tuesday. This has led to speculation, which the White House began trying to discourage Friday, that the United States might make some drastic shift in policy, possibly including the bombing of Viet Cong supply lines.

In his first full-dress news conference since Oct. 3, Johnson touched many bases inaddition to NATO and Viet Nam.

Even before the questioning started, he defended his decision to allow U. S. planes to airlift Belgian paratroopers to rescue hostages of Congolese rebels in Stanleyville.

"We acted and we acted promptly in order to keep hundreds and even thousands of people from being massacred," he said. "And we did act in time."

He announced that the paratroop force that moved into Stanleyville will be moved out Saturday night to Ascension Island in the South Atlantic.

He said this country has no political goals to impose on the Congo, and acted out of purely humanitarian motives.

Johnson said he had wired the families of the three Americans killed by the Congo rebels "my great sympathy for them in this hour."

Says Court Jury

Cigarettes Safe For Consumption

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A federal court jury, in a landmark decision in the cigarettes-cancer controversy, has found that cigarettes "are reasonably safe and wholesome for human consumption."

The decision, denying damages to the estate of Edwin M. Green of Miami, a heavy smoker who died of lung cancer in 1957, was expected to have a strong effect on other pending or planned litigation.

Green's widow, Mary, and his son, Edwin Jr., had contended that Green's cancer was caused by smoking three packs of Lucky Strike cigarettes a day for 30 years. They had sued the American Tobacco Co., for $1.5 million.

"This is welcome news," said W. P. Hedrick, tobacco marketing specialist for the Department of Agriculture of North Carolina, one of the large tobacco producing states.

It was, he said, "a good sign for tobacco in the face of the surgeon general's report" on the harmful effects of cigarette smoking.

Dr. Lawrence V. Hastings of Miami, a physician and lawyer representing the Greens, withheld a decision on whether to appeal the case until after an exhaustive study of the court record.

But Hastings predicted that an eventual verdict that cigarette smoking does cause lung cancer "is inevitable."

"The right decision will be forthcoming," he said, "because the health of the world is at stake. Some day, the tobacco manufacturers will be forced to make a safe cigarette."

Hastings said such a decision will be difficult to get.

"A good number of the jurors were smokers," he said, "and a finding that cigarettes were harmful would make it hard for them to justify their continued smoking to themselves.

"And a nonsmoker may decide: 'Why give a verdict to a smoker who knew he was indulging in a potentially harmful habit and who brought his troubles on himself?'"

A previous trial jury had held that smoking was a cause of Green's death. But it awarded no damages to his estate, because it said the tobacco company did not know at the time that cigarettes might cause cancer.

Later, an appeals court ordered a new trial after the Florida Supreme Court held that the company's "implied warranty" of the purity of its product made it responsible for smoking's consequences.

Wave of Shoppers Into Sedalia

Despite a hard driving rain, large hailstones, followed by a blanket of fog, central Missourians launched the Christmas shopping season with a bang in Sedalia Friday night.

All shopping areas throughout the city were swollen with crowds up to closing time and every business barometer used to measure the Christmas sales boom points to a record year for Sedalia merchants.

With two additional shopping days this year between Thanksgiving and Christmas, over the 1963 period, the cool temperatures, always a factor in creating Christmas spirit, and the addition of new stores in the city, heavier than usual traffic moved into Sedalia with bargain hunters apparently filled with Christmas spirit.

Most merchants are optimistic that this will be a banner season.

"Things are really in high gear," says Bob Cain of Cash Hardware. "But I look for the Christmas parade (scheduled for next Saturday) to get things going in an even bigger way. It always does."

"The Christmas shopping season has started with a bang," states Kobel Beneau, assistant manager at Patterson's. "Business is good now. Stores are well stocked with merchandise and I think it will be banner shopping season."

"If what we are doing now is an indication, it's going to be a fabulous season," comments Bob Singleton, manager of the Katz Store in the Thompson Hills Shopping Center. "We have already had to re-order wrapping paper, decorations and other items to meet the initial demands . . . and we thought we had stocked enough for the entire month of December." Singleton says out of town shoppers, many from long distances, account for much of the traffic at the Katz Store.

"Our store is filled with customers all the time," states Mrs. Virginia Flower, president of C. W. Flower Co. Damon Hieronymus, manager of the store, commented that the warm weather early last week slowed the pre - Thanksgiving shopping crowds, "but the outlook is for excellent business during the entire Christmas shopping season."

A look inside many downtown stores and those in the new shopping center Friday revealed a buying rush far larger than last year's crowd. On Sedalia streets and in parking lots, a spot check of automobiles—with their tell-tale stickers—indicated that many shoppers from communities throughout the area helped swell Friday's crowd.

Democrat - Capital reporters have heard more comments on the downtown Christmas decorations this year than in any year on record. Some comments overheard indicate that the decorations are far more appealing than those in other communities of comparable size across the entire country.

The dampness of streets and parking lots seemed to be encouragement for the out - of-school students to make a tour of decorated store fronts and eye the fabulous displays behind the glass of all the stores' fronts.

Toylands at the various stores were also big attractions to mothers and fathers wondering what to buy and for youngsters wondering what they were going to receive.

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: If this had happened to me only once I would overlook it, but since it seems to be a recurring problem, I need some advice.

What does one do when he is a guest in a home and is served food which contains some foreign and inedible body?

Some months ago a beautifully arranged salad was placed before me. Under one of the lettuce leaves was a dead bug. I almost gagged when I saw it but managed to control myself.

A few weeks later I was served a fly in the soup. This occurred in a restaurant so I simply sent the soup back. (The waiter apologized.)

Last night it happened again—at a dinner party in the home of a friend. The dessert was peaches and ice cream. I was half way through the dessert when I spotted two little worms on a peach section. I was talking with the hostess at the time and heroically ate around the little creatures.

What shall I do if this sort of thing occurs again? — NOT HUNGRY.

Dear Not: Just keep on doing what you're doing. So far you've fielded the emergencies with admirable aplomb. Anyone who can eat around worms and carry on a conversation with the hostess doesn't need advice from ME.

Dear Ann Landers: How do I break the news to a woman that it's all over? I'm a divorced man who has been going with a 42-year-old woman for almost four years. She has never been married, owns her own home, plus other inherited property. I'm afraid she's too comfortable for her own good. I asked her two years ago to set the date but she never got around to it.

Three months ago I ran into a woman I used to know back in Montana. Her husband died last year and she moved to this city to live with her widowed sister. The second time I took her out I knew she'd be a wonderful wife for me. She said "yes" on our fourth date.

Now how do I tell the other woman without hurting her feelings? After all, I took up four years of her time.—ALEX.

Dear Alex: Your solicitude is unwarranted. A 42-year-old maiden lady who has been dragging her feet on the way to the altar isn't going to take the news very hard. She may even be relieved.

Dear Ann Landers: My three married daughters are always having trouble with their husbands. They all have children, which, in my eyes, is reason enough to keep a home together even if it isn't all honey and roses.

For the past six years one daughter or another has been at home with me at least half the time. They just show up at the door with their children and say, "I've left him for good this time."

In a few days the husband appears and they sit down and talk things over for half an hour. Then they leave together—happy.

If they can talk it over in MY living room, why can't they talk it over in their own living room? I've told them repeatedly I don't want to be involved in their family troubles and not to come running home. They come anyway. At the moment two girls are here with their five children. I can't lock them out. What's the solution? — UNWITTING ACCOMPLICE.

Dear Unwitting: Prove you mean business by saying, "Come in. I will phone a hotel or a motel for you because you can't stay here."

When they have to shell out money for room and board they won't run away from their husbands so fast.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this Newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Daily Record

● Circuit Court

Circuit Judge Frank W. Hayes Friday morning upheld a defense motion to suppress the state's evidence against three Negroes, one from Sedalia and two from Kansas City, who are charged with possession of a narcotic drug.

Hayes sustained arguments of defense attorney William F. Brown that evidence against the three had been obtained through illegal search and seizure by law enforcement officers acting without a search warrant.

Disallowance of the state's evidence apparently leaves little case against Richard (Little Richard) Thomas, 39, 820 North Missouri; Mattie H. McColum, 24, and Gloria M. Doyal, 26, both of Kansas City.

A fourth defendant, Eli E. Gilbert, 40, 108 West Johnson, was acquitted by a Circuit Court jury here on Sept. 18 this year on the same charge. The jury deliberated only 29 minutes before freeing Gilbert.

The Negro couples had been arrested about 6:30 p.m. the evening of Sept. 9, 1963, by Sheriff Emmett Fairfax and his deputies at the intersection of West Main and State Fair Blvd. here in Sedalia. Sheriff Fairfax had received a telephone tip from Claude Follmer, a federal narcotics agent in Kansas City, that the four were enroute to Sedalia from Kansas City and were purported to be in possession of some marijuana and possibly some heroin. Agent Follmer had received his information from an informant for the federal bureau in Kansas City.

The officers found no heroin, however, but fragments of a green, vegetable substance picked up from the inside of the car were identified by a federal chemist as marijuana.

Testimony at the hearing to suppress the evidence was given by defendants, Gilbert, McColum and Doyal, as well as Sheriff Emmett Fairfax.

Fairfax testified the defendants were not searched after they were stopped, but were taken to the county jail, where clothing of the men was searched about 10 p.m. that night after arrival of two federal narcotics agents. Fairfax said the Cadillac automobile they were in was locked after the arrest and searched after 10 p.m. by himself and the narcotics agents.

The car was then taken to a local garage and was later impounded by the federal officers. Thomas, himself, testified Friday he has not seen the auto since.

Sheriff Fairfax testified he had no warrant for the arrest of the four Negroes at the time they were taken into custody or no search warrant then or when their belongings were searched later at the jail.

Brown argued Sheriff Fairfax had sufficient time to obtain a search warrant since he had obtained the telephone tip from Agent Follmer at 5:10 p.m. and did not make the arrest until approximately 6:30 p.m.

The suppression of the evidence also included one sample of the vegetable substance, which was dropped from the auto in presence of the arresting officers.

Sheriff Fairfax had testified Gloria Doyal put her hand out the window of the car and dropped some of the substance after the officers had stopped the auto initially. Some of the substance remained on the side of the car, was collected in an envelope by the sheriff and was later determined to be marijuana under chemical analysis.

Thomas and the two women are free on bond.

Food Poisoning From Warmed Overs

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Eight members of the Ben Goodon family remained in city hospital overnight for observation after suffering food poisoning from Thanksgiving Day leftovers Friday.

None was listed as serious.

Only the 10-month-old baby, Brenda, escaped the illness because she was too young to eat the warmed over turkey and dressing.

Her mother, Doris, 31, although ill, decided to stay home with the infant.

In the hospital were the father, Ben Goodon, 35; sons Charles, 12, George 10, Marion 9, and Logan 6, and daughters Judy, 14, Deborah 8, and Charlene 3.

A 1964 PONY EXPRESS—Members of the Communications Workers of America are sponsoring a "Pony Express" ride from Brownsville, Texas to St. Louis. The above scene, taken at Tipton, was repeated in Sedalia last Saturday. According to Gordon Williams, chairman of the local CWA committee on equal pay, horses used in the relays through the mid-Missouri area were furnished by Elwood Thompson and George Taylor of Sedalia; Cecil Jefferies of Eldon; and Mike O'Connor, Sedalia, furnished a horse trailer to the group. The riders delivered to the president of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in St. Louis letters from various people supporting their efforts, according to Williams. Members of Local 6314 met the Pony Express riders and horses in Warrensburg to carry the mail through their territory on to the boundary of the neighboring local.

Extend Suspension Of Training a Month

FORT ORD, Calif. (AP) — The Army has extended the suspension of basic training at Fort Ord for an additional month through Jan. 31 in the wake of the lingering meningitis outbreak.

Previous plans to close the post to recruits during December only were shelved "to make certain that the disease is stamped out," an Army spokesman said Friday. Health and sanitation measures are planned.

Two of Ouadruplets Return to Hospital

JACKSON, Tenn. (AP) — Two of the Lyons Quadruplets are back in the hospital where they were born after a brief stay at home in nearby Maury City, Tenn.

Lamar and Willie Lyons Jr., were hospitalized Friday for what hospital administrator T. Ray Jones called "observation due to head colds."

The quads were born Nov. 1 to the Rev. and Mrs. Willie Grant Lyons. Lamar and a sister, Carline, went home Nov. 19. Willie Jr. and Polly Ann left the hospital Monday.

Lyons is a part-time Negro preacher who supplements his $28 a month salary doing odd jobs. A fund to aid the family has reached $7,000. Contributions of $1,377 Friday included a $250 check from Gov. Frank Clement and his cabinet.

During Coming Year

Highway Oiling Program To Cost $2.1 Million

The Missouri State Highway Commission, at its November meeting in Jefferson City, gave approval for oil surface treatment to 1,174.6 miles of Secondary (farm to market) system routes during the summer months of calendar 1965.

These improvements will extend into all sections of the state and will cost an estimated $2,114,280.

This 1965 oiling program furthers the State Highway Commission's effort to provide additional "dust-free" surface highways for Missouri highway users.

The work includes sections with an average daily traffic count of 75 or more vehicles per day, along with a few gaps and short isolated gravel sections.

The actual application of the oil treatment to the roads will not be done until next spring or summer, since this type of improvement is a warm weather operation. The Department's district maintenance crews, however, during the winter months and early spring prepare the roads with stabilization work such as grading, ditch cleaning, etc., in order that the actual application of oil can move forward at the earliest possible time next year.

Work in this area, by county, includes:

Benton: Route M, 6.5 miles from Route V, north and east; Route T, 2.6 miles from US Route 65, west; Route Z, three miles from Route 7, west; Route VV, 1.1 miles from Route AA south to Hickory County; and Route DD, 2.4 miles from Route FF, north.

Dates Ahead

Monday, Dec. 1 — Annual Balanced Farming Recognition Dinner, 6 p.m. First Methodist Church, Fourth and Osage.

Annual Extension Home Economist Convention

During the week of Nov. 15, I attended the Annual Convention of Extension Home Economists held at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C. The theme was "Four Dimensions of Citizenship" Home; Community; Nation; World. The convention started Sunday, Nov. 15 at 2 p.m. with the President, Mrs. Helen S. Whittington, DeWitt, Iowa, presiding. The featured speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. Mary Keyserling, Director, Women's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labor.

Other speakers during the convention included: Mrs. Esther Peterson, Special Assistant to the President of the United States. Her subject was the Rights and Responsibilities of the Consumer. Dr. Robert Haakenson, Community Relations Manager, Department of Public and Industry Affairs, Smith Kline and French Laboratories, Philadelphia, Penn., spoke on "Are You Listening." Mrs. Dorothy Jackson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for International Affairs discussed "The Challenge of Change." The Honorable Dean Rusk, Secretary of State spoke to the group on Tuesday, Nov. 17.

The convention closed Wednesday, Nov. 18 with the Recognition Brunch, courtesy of Coats & Clark, Inc. and Simplicity Patterns Company. A fashion review followed the meal. The address was given by Dr. Lloyd H. Davis, Administrator, Federal Extension Service. His subject was "Your Educational Leadership in the Decade Ahead." He also presented the recognition awards to 73 Extension Home Economists from the United States and Puerto Rico.

A total of 43 exhibitors were present with their displays of up-to-date information and products in the field of foods clothing, home management and related home economics fields.

A total of over 1,000 County, State, and Federal Extension Home Economists and visitors attended this convention.

Tips With Turkey

A flavorful combination of turkey, noodles, consomme, green pepper, mushrooms, pimiento, peas, grated American cheese, and buttered bread crumbs will rank high on your family's "good to eat" list.

Diced turkey adds a tempting touch to a spaghetti, corn and mushroom soup casserole. Sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs before baking in a moderate oven.

Glamorize a puffy omelet by adding cooked noodles and diced turkey to the egg yolks before you fold in the beaten whites. Top with cranberry sauce.

Fallacies Concerning Weight Reduction

FALLACY: Obesity is due entirely to heredity.

FACT: Obesity is caused primarily by overeating. More calories are taken into the body than are used and, as a result, fat is stored. Too many calories in the daily family meals may be responsible for all of the family being overweight. While heredity may play a part in obesity, weight can be controlled by a limitation of calories.

FALLACY: In the experience of some people all foods turn to fat.

FACT: Fat is the body's way of storing excess foods. The source of this excess may be protein, fat, or carbohydrate. Fat is formed only when total energy from these sources exceeds the amount needed for daily living.

FALLACY: Meal skipping is a good way to lose weight.

FACT: Meal skipping is a poor way to lose weight. It actually may increase appetite for the next meal or for between meal snacks, which results in increased food intake. Skipping of meal is likely to lead to the choice of unbalanced diets. Actually, several small and regular meals each day may provide greater satisfaction to the person on a reducing diet than the normal three-meal pattern.

FALLACY: You can eat all you want and still lose weight if you take "reducing pills."

FACT: Certain drugs are available which depress the appetitite. Only a competent physician should prescribe and direct the use of these drugs. The drugs themselves do not cause weight loss but simply aid in controlling the appetite.

FALLACY: One must not drink water when trying to lose weight.

FACT: Water is essential to health at all times, and a restriction of water intake should not be practiced except under careful medical supervision. When trying to lose weight it is desirable to drink water between meals because it often will relieve hunger pangs.

Christmas Seals Motions Picture Being Shown

A Christmas Seal motion picture is being shown at the Fox Theater and the Drive In Theater during the Christmas Seal Campaign by Pettis County Tuberculosis Association.

The Christmas Seal "Love Story" features Eli Wallach in an informal journey through a park where momentary adventures with children and people help build an atmosphere of pictorial interest and warmth. There is no invasion of "viewer's privacy and comfort" on behalf of a cause or collection but a simple, lyric documentary. It concludes with a simple statement from Mr. Wallach:

"Answer your Christmas Seal letter as soon as it arrives. . . it's that love letter that comes once a year for you. Please use Christmas Seals generously. So much love. . . for so little, and it's all yours."

Ed B. Smith, chairman of the Pettis County TB Association encourages contributions be sent to Mrs. Shirley Wagner, treasurer Pettis County Tuberculosis Association, 107½ West Third, Sedalia, Mo.

Candle Glow Signals Opening of Hanukkah

NEW YORK (AP) — In millions of Jewish homes Sunday night, a candle or an orange-colored bulb will be lit, signifying the start of the Festival of Lights, otherwise known as Hanukkah.

Monday night two lights will shine; on the third night, three; and so on, until on the eighth and final night of the holiday, eight lights are burning.

Jewish children customarily receive presents on one or all of these nights.

Hanukkah has its origins in the defeat of a Greek army some 2,000 years ago by a small band of Jewish fighters and in their subsequent triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

According to legend, as the Jews were cleansing the holy temple there for its rededication, they found a container with only enough oil to light their work for one day. But the oil in the lamp miraculously burned for eight days.

Ex-Pitching Prospect Is VISTA Head

WASHINGTON (AP) — Glenn W. Ferguson, 35, a one-time major league pitching prospect who has worked for the Peace Corps for the past three years, will now turn his experience to the domestic version of the corps—VISTA.

As director of VISTA — which stands for Volunteers in Service to America — Ferguson will be doing much the same work as he did when the Peace Corps was established in 1961.

He will be responsible for recruiting, selecting, training and directing an estimated 3,500 volunteers to work in the nation's poverty-stricken areas as part of President Johnson's anti-poverty program.

Johnson announced appointment of Ferguson Friday.

Since 1963 Ferguson has been associate director of the Peace Corps in charge of volunteers. He previously served overseas helping set up Peace Corps programs.

After his freshman year at Cornell University, Ferguson, who had pitched a no-hitter in high school, was offered a job with the Orlando, Fla., baseball team, then a farm club of the Washington Senators.

But while pitching for Cornell on a cold day he developed a bad elbow that ended his hurling career.

"It was probably best," Ferguson says, "because there were other things more important to do."

Ferguson was active in other sports, too. He was a 10-second man in the 100-yard dash and won his letter in baseball, football and track at Cornell.

Squash now is his favorite personal participation sport but he also is a frequent player in touch football games at Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver's Maryland home.

Less active hobbies that hold his interest away from the office include coin collecting and bird watching.

Ferguson was born in Syracuse, N.Y., but his family moved to the Washington suburban area when he was a child. He has been married 15 years and has three children, Bruce, 10; Sherry, 8; and Scott, 6. His wife, the former Patricia Read, is another Washington area native — she was reared in suburban Falls Church, Va.

He saw military service in the Korean War as an Air Force first lieutenant assigned to psychological warfare in the Philippines, Japan and Korea.

Before joining the Peace Corps staff in 1961 he held a variety of posts in education and as a management consultant.

Amputee Must Adjust To A New Home

CLEVELAND (AP) — Now that her battle against cancer, which cost her a leg, has been won, Christine Simko, 14, will have another adjustment to make — in a children's home in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Christine's plight from hip cancer became widely known when she ran away from the hospital just before her leg was to be amputated.

The operation was necessary to save her life, doctors said. Her mother refused to allow it and it had to be ordered by Juvenile Court Judge Walter G. Whitlatch.

But Christine is unhappy over the prospect of living at the home, which she visited last month.

"All these institutions are the same," she said. "You really don't know what they're like until you're in them and can't leave."

Placing her in the Protestant Home for Dependent Children is the Cuyahoga County Division of Child Welfare. She has been in county hospitals here for almost a year.

"The home is a good place for her," Judge Whitlatch said.

"Christine's biggest offense was not getting along with her mother and running away from home. She isn't a bad girl but she needs direction."

Sub Patrol Plane Crash Kills Dozen

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Twelve Navy fliers died Friday when an anti-submarine patrol plane crashed into a mountain near the tip of Cape Newenham, 250 miles northwest of Kodiak.

A four-man rescue party found the wreckage of the burned plane and bodies of the crew. The rescuers were led by Maj. Curtiss Gruye, commander of the Cape Newenham distant aircraft control and warning station.

Madonna Show, Silver Tea Set By Garden Clubs

A Madonna Show and silver tea will be held at the First Christian Church Fellowship Hall on Friday, Dec. 4, sponsored by the Past Presidents of the Sedalia Garden Clubs. This is the first time a Madonna Show has been held in Sedalia. It is open to the public, from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. with the tea to be from 1 to 5 p.m.

The Madonna Show will be divided into four classes but will not be judged. It is only for display with the thought in mind to give suggestions for the Christmas season.

The classes are as follows: 1, Madonna used as container or accessory using all fresh material; 2, Madonna used as container or accessory using dry material; 3, Madonna arrangement, may use drift, weathered or painted wood with fresh, dry or treated material; 4, Madonna with or without accessories, using Christmas decorations such as flowers, balls, cones, painted or treated material.

Arrangements are open to all garden club members and members of the Past Presidents Club, of which Mrs. J. W. Boger is president.

Arrangements will be placed from 9 to 11 a.m. Friday.

Canaday Guilty On Two Counts Of Tax Evasion

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Lt. Col. William M.Canaday of the police department was convicted Friday on two counts of income tax evasion and was acquitted on two other counts in federal district court.

Canaday was suspended as head of the police uniform patrol after he was indicted last March by a grand jury.

He was convicted of evading payment of $2,341 income taxes for the years 1959 and 1960.

He was acquitted on charges of evading $2,483 in taxes for the years 1957 and 1958.

The grand jury alleged evasion of nearly $5,000 for the four years.

The maximum penalty would be a five-year prison sentence and-or a $10,000 fine on each of the two counts.

Canaday remained free under $1,000 bond. His attorney has 20 days in which to request a new trial.

He listened to the verdict quietly, with his hands folded in his lap.

For 1959, he was accused of paying $979 on a reported $4,815 income while he should have paid $2,257 tax on his actual income of $10,222.

For 1960, the government charged his true income was $9,794 on which the tax should have been $2,146, but he reported $5,290 income and paid only $1,083 tax.

A major point of the two-week trial was whether Canaday had saved more than $10,000 before 1957 and kept it in a box at home and thus was able to spend more money than he earned in succeeding years.

Canaday testified his hoard came from social gambling, cash gifts and gift bonds. He said he was not aware that gambling winnings were supposed to be reported as income.

Investor's Fortune To Be Distributed

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago judge has granted a 78-year-old investor's wish to distribute about half of his $12 million dollar fortune among 25 friends and business associates that "I may see them enjoy it."

Lawrence L. Goddard, a retired head clerk for an insurance company, pointedly omitted a daughter, a niece and a nephew from his largesse and assured Circuit Judge Daniel A. Covelli Friday he knows what he is doing.

Goddard, from a wheelchair, told the judge he wanted to repay his friends for "kindnesses accorded the donor." He said he had not received the same kindnesses from his daughter, Florence; a niece, Margaret L., and a nephew, Leland. Goddard did not elaborate.

Goddard assured Judge Covelli that he'll manage quite comfortably on the $21,000 annual income from the stock he retains.

House whitewash" of the probe into his affairs.

The last time Baker was called before a Senate committee, he invoked the 5th Amendment and refused to answer questions.

That Senate probe brought out Baker's claimed net worth increased from $11,000 to over $2 million after he became the Senate's majority secretary in 1955.

In its report on that investigation, the committee found baker "guilty of many gross improprieties," saying he had used his senate office "as if it were a private business office."

Baker resigned his $19,600-a-year job a year ago last October. He was a one-time page boy from Pickens, S.C., who was a close associate of Johnson in the years the President was in the Senate.

A federal grand jury also has been probing Baker's affairs for several months.

Security Precautions For Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Elaborate security arrangements, to protect Pope Paul VI from the moment he leaves the Vatican for India until his return, were set in motion Saturday.

Italian, Vatican and Indian authorities made it clear they are taking every precaution during the Pope's trip to Bombay — the longest journey ever undertaken by a pontiff.

Newsmen and others traveling on the Pope's plane from Rome to Bombay next Wednesday were told they must turn in their luggage, with keys, a day in advance.

"This is a security arrangement," said an official. "We are taking no chances on any hidden objects."

It was obvious what he meant by objects.

The Pope is traveling on a regular airline jet flight that is open to nonofficial passengers approved by security authorities.

Vatican gendarmerie officials already were in India, sending back reports that they and Indian authorities were taking all possible measures in the light of Hindu extremist agitation against the Pope and the International Eucharistic Congress he will attend.

"Frankly, we are more worried about security in India than we were in the Holy Land," said a Vatican officer, referring to Pope Paul's trip to Palestine last January.

The 67-year-old spiritual leader of half a billion Roman Catholics will leave for Bombay before dawn Wednesday and reach the Indian city before dusk. He will return to Rome late Saturday afternoon.

Dies In Hospital After Accident Fri.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Kermit Boeke, 56, of Hubbard, Iowa, died in a St. Joseph Hospital Saturday, a victim of a highway accident.

Boeke was injured three miles south of Cameron, Mo., on U.S. 69 Friday when his car and a house trailer overturned. His wife, Azalea Marie, 55, was driving and escaped injury.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said a truck, driven by Dean Getting, 27, of Grundy Center, Iowa, sideswiped the Boeke vehicle while passing on a hill, forcing the car into the ditch. The trailer was demolished.

Boeke was taken to the Cameron hospital, then was moved to St. Joseph Saturday. Besides his wife, he leaves two daughters, Mrs. Barbara Jean Whitney of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Janice Marie Hayes of Cambridge, Mass.; his mother, Mrs. Ada L. Boeke of Hubbard, and two brothers.

Russ Potter

First Travel Program Set Wednesday

Russ Potter, nationally known travel film producer and narrator of Battle Creek, Mich., will present "Belgium Of The Masters," a color motion picture which he will narrate in person, on Wednesday, Dec. 2, 8 p.m. in the Smith-Cotton High School auditorium. This is the first of the 1964-65 season ticket presentations of the Travel and Adventure series of six productions sponsored by the Sedalia Rotary Club. Net proceeds will be used by the club to underwrite worthy community projects.

The beauty and gaiety of Belgium, Europe's most densely populated country, have been recorded by Russ Potter's cameras to bring a fresh new Belgium. It is steeped in the grandeur of the old masters and crackling with jet-age vitality.

Potter, whose mother was a grandniece of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt and a nationally known mural artist, was graduated from Indiana University where he majored in journalism and speech. At 17 he won the Indiana Literary Field Day competition and received awards from famous authors Booth Tarrington and George Ade. During World War II he wrote and MC'd a network radio program emanating from a Navy Convalescent Hospital.

Since 1948 he has gained world-wide recognition as the narrator and script writer of the Festival of Arts at Laguna Beach, Calif., where more than a million spectators from every state and 14 foreign countries have enjoyed his witty and erudite commentary. His frequent TV appearances have made him a favorite of home-screen viewers. He is narrator for Walt Disney's LP musical album, "Walt Disney's Great Composers."

Tickets from the series may be purchased from any member of the Sedalia Rotary Club.

Birdsong To Attend Legislative Meeting Of County Judges

County Judge E. L. Birdsong, Route 1, Smithton, will attend a meeting Monday in Jefferson City with legislative committee members from county judges associations throughout the state.

The judges will plan strategy on bills they hope to get through the next legislature. Among bills sure to get a major push from the county judges are measures to distribute the county share of the state 5-cent gasoline tax directly to the county treasuries and to allow four-year terms for associate county judges. Both of these measures were stifled in committee in the last legislature.

Johnson Pet Beagle Dies; Swallowed Rock

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson announced Saturday that "Her," one of his two pet beagles, died Friday on the operating table after swallowing a rock on the White House grounds.

The President, saying "We have had a tragedy," announced the dog's death after a news conference Saturday morning on the lawn in front of his LBJ Ranch home.

Johnson did not say where the dog had been taken for the operation, although there were reports that it was Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington.

"Luci (Johnson's daughter) is heartbroken about Her," Johnson said.

"Her" and the other Johnson beagle, "Him," became internationally famous earlier this year after Johnson outraged some dog lovers by hoisting them by the ears.

The President stoutly maintains this is proper treatment for beagles.

Life Is Too Hard

NITEROI, Brazil (AP) — Two brothers, Edisio and Crisne Sangeroti Lima, who broke out of prison seven months ago, have turned themselves in to authorities, explaining life on the outside is just too hard.

Vietnamese Forces Move On Ground

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — Moving smoothly on the ground and supported by artillery and helicopter strikes, government forces killed at least 46 Viet Cong and captured 70 Saturday 27 miles southwest of Saigon.

In addition to the confirmed dead, the guerrillas were estimated to have lost 90 in killed and wounded carried from the battlefield of lush green rice paddies near Chao Gao.

The government also claimed 73 Viet Cong killed in a heavy engagement near the North Vietnamese frontier and 77 killed in three separate actions in Quang Nam province on Friday.

Saigon was calm under martial law after a week of civil unrest that left more than 100 persons injured in street riots.

Buddhist students, nevertheless, completed plans to hold a public funeral Sunday for a 15-year-old boy shot during antigovernment demonstrations.

In an attempt to head off violence, military Gov. Brig. Gen. Pham Van Dong issued special restrictions for the funeral: only 200 persons may follow the body; they must ride in cars, and the caravan must take the shortest route from Buddhist headquarters to Gia Dinh cemetery.

Prospects for maintenance of calm were dealt a blow with an announcement by one of South Viet Nam's most influential Buddhist leaders that unless the new civilian government is removed legally, "then we will take steps to remove it ourselves."

Thich Tam Chau charged that Prime Minister Tran Van Huong "no longer has the confidence of the people. In order to fight the biggest threat to Viet Nam — communism — we must have a united and popular government."

Tam Chau, who played a key role in the overthrow of Ngo Dinh Diem last year, delivered his ultimatum at a news conference. But he issued no time limit for Huong's removal.

The priest called on the High National Council to oust Huong and if it does not, "we will do so ourselves by a program of noncooperation and nonviolence against the government."

UNEMPLOYMENT, HOW MUCH?—The achievement of full employment may be much nearer than the unemployment figures imply. Grouped in total unemployment figures are teen-agers and part-time female employes as well as men. Broken down into these components, the unemployment rate takes on a new look. The rate for adult men has had a definite downward trend since mid-1961, producing a wider gap between male and female unemployment. On the other hand, the rate for teen-agers has fluctuated between 13 per cent and 18 per cent with no downward trend visible.

Army Frustration Brings Fourth-Quarter Victory

Navy Erases 8-0 Lead In Second Period Of Play

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Quarterback Carl Stichweh marshaled five years of Army frustration into a last quarter drive which produced a 20-yard field goal by Barry Nickerson and an 11-8 football upset over Navy Saturday.

The favored Middies, getting a life from a roughing the kicker penalty against John Carber, got to the Army 28 near the finish but a mauling Cadet defensive rush shoved the Sailors' Roger Staubach back to his own 4. Army saw an 8-0 lead erased on the second period efforts of Staubach and Pat Donnelly plus a two-point conversion pass to Phil Norton with 25 seconds left before intermission.

But when Navy's Tom Williams was far short and wide of a 49-yard field goal try moments before the end of the third quarter, Stichweh took firm command of the game.

Starting from his 20, Stichweh called a key 17-yard fake pass and left end sweep to his 48.

On the next play, he lofted a long aerial to end Sam Champi, who feinted away from four defenders and reached the 19, good for a 33-yard advance.

From the 13, Stichweh personally ushered the ball to the three where, on fourth down, Nickerson's field goal kick was true. He had been wide on an earlier conversion try.

Army was on the scoreboard in just three plays when linebacker Sonny Stovers led a charge of five defenders, who dumped Staubach hard in his end zone for a safety.

The Cadets needed only three plays to cover 54 yards on John Seymour's climax running early in the second. Stichweh passed the final five yards to Champi.

Navy used the last 19 scrimmage plays of the first half to go 69 yards, sophomore Tom Leiser diving the final yard on fourth down with 25 seconds left.

Wins Second Crown

OMAHA (AP)—For the second year in a row John Camien of Emporia, Kan., won the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics cross - country championship Saturday. Howard Payne College won the team title with an unheard of low score.

Howard Payne's total was 29 —low score wins—and all five of the Brownwood, Tex., schools team members finished within the top 11 in a record field of 140.

Whitworth (Wash.) was second with 79 points.

1964 Rookies Of The Year Are Named

BOSTON (AP) — American League batting champion Tony Oliva of Minnesota and third baseman Richie Allen of the Philadelphia Phillies were named 1964 Rookies of the Year for their respective leagues Saturday.

Oliva, the 25-year-old native of Cuba using a brother's name, was picked on 19 of the 20 ballots cast by a special committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Allen scored on 18 ballots.

Pitcher Wally Bunker of the Baltimore Orioles received the other American League vote. Rico Carty of the Milwaukee Braves and Jim Ray Hart of the San Francisco Giants received single votes in the National League balloting.

Allen, who is selling cars in Philadelphia during the off season, expressed great surprise at his selection.

"Honestly I felt Rico Carty or Jim Ray Hart would get the award because of my strikeouts and errors in the last half of the season. Playing with a good club helped me."

Oliva won the AL batting crown by hitting .323, six points higher than Baltimore's Brooks Robinson, the AL Most Valuable Player. Oliva also led the league in runs with 109, hits (217) and doubles (43).

He finished high up in the power department as well with 32 home runs and 95 runs batted in.

Allen's hitting was greatly responsible for keeping the Phillies in the thick of the NL pennant fight.

The bespectacled third baseman from Wampum, Pa., who ignored college basketball scholarship offers because of the baseball bonus money, was fifth in the NL batting race with a .318 average.

He led the league in runs scored with 125 while collecting 201 hits. He had 29 home runs and 91 runs batted in.

Sports Scraps

By D. KELLY SCRUTON

SURELY the jinx isn't going to hold through the basketball season for the Smith-Cotton Tigers, or is it going to be a bad season for both Sedalia teams, including Sacred Heart. The Tigers opened their season this past week with the California Pintos hanging a loss on them, 82-66, while the Gremlins of Sacred Heart haven't been able to get off the ground, other than one win over the Alumni, while the loss column shows six.

There's plenty of time to whip into shape before going into the tough battles of conference play for the Tigers which begins Jan. 9, with Rolla. in the meantime the Tigers will have four more non-conference games and two tournaments tucked away which will be ample practice for them.

Sacred Heart, playing in the Pettis-Benton Activities Association circuit, has been playing for several weeks under the smaller school program, but this team, too, should begin showing up better as the time rolls by.

We must mention the Sacred Heart volleyball girls team which already has started with a 3-1 record to their credit.

Smith-Cotton had one trouble getting started early due to the football players who move into the winter sport. They have to limber up and become "retrained" for the hardboards and already with the short time of practice for them, they are showing daily improvement.

Coach Earl Finley is confident his team will be in for a much better showing as the season rolls by.

—o—

NO I haven't given up on the planned Booster Club for the Smith-Cotton High School athletic program, regardless of what some "wheels" think about it. However, I am rather disappointed in a number of Sedalia business men, who gigged me into starting the discussion after they had started getting members at five-bucks apiece and during which time a goodly number had paid dues and let it be known they were interested.

The disappointment is over the fact after they had queried the school board about their plan, then stopped me and suggested a campaign. It was started, but they have failed to call together those who have paid for a meeting and a proposed organizational program.

What I can't understand is why the school board apparently is bowing to some one who does not favor a club. I was hoping these school board members would be more than just "yes" subjects and certainly those members who are interested have bowed out and apparently feared reprecussions if they spoke up.

Towns which do have such organizations are proud of their club and it adds a lot of zest to the support of athletics. The club is only an organization to encourage young people to take an active part in school functions, especially athletics. The club does not and cannot do any dictating to the school or coaching staffs or head coaches, as to their respective team or sports event.

It can and would be a big benefit to encouraging sports, not only in Smith-Cotton but also Sacred Heart. It could be a big help in encouraging a better school spirit.

Yes, as I understand it, the organization could be one which could be an encouragement, not only to the boys in their activities, but also to the girls in their athletic activities. Certainly if such a Booster Club is organized and gets to clicking, I would also, personally, encourage them to take an interest in the girls activities as well.

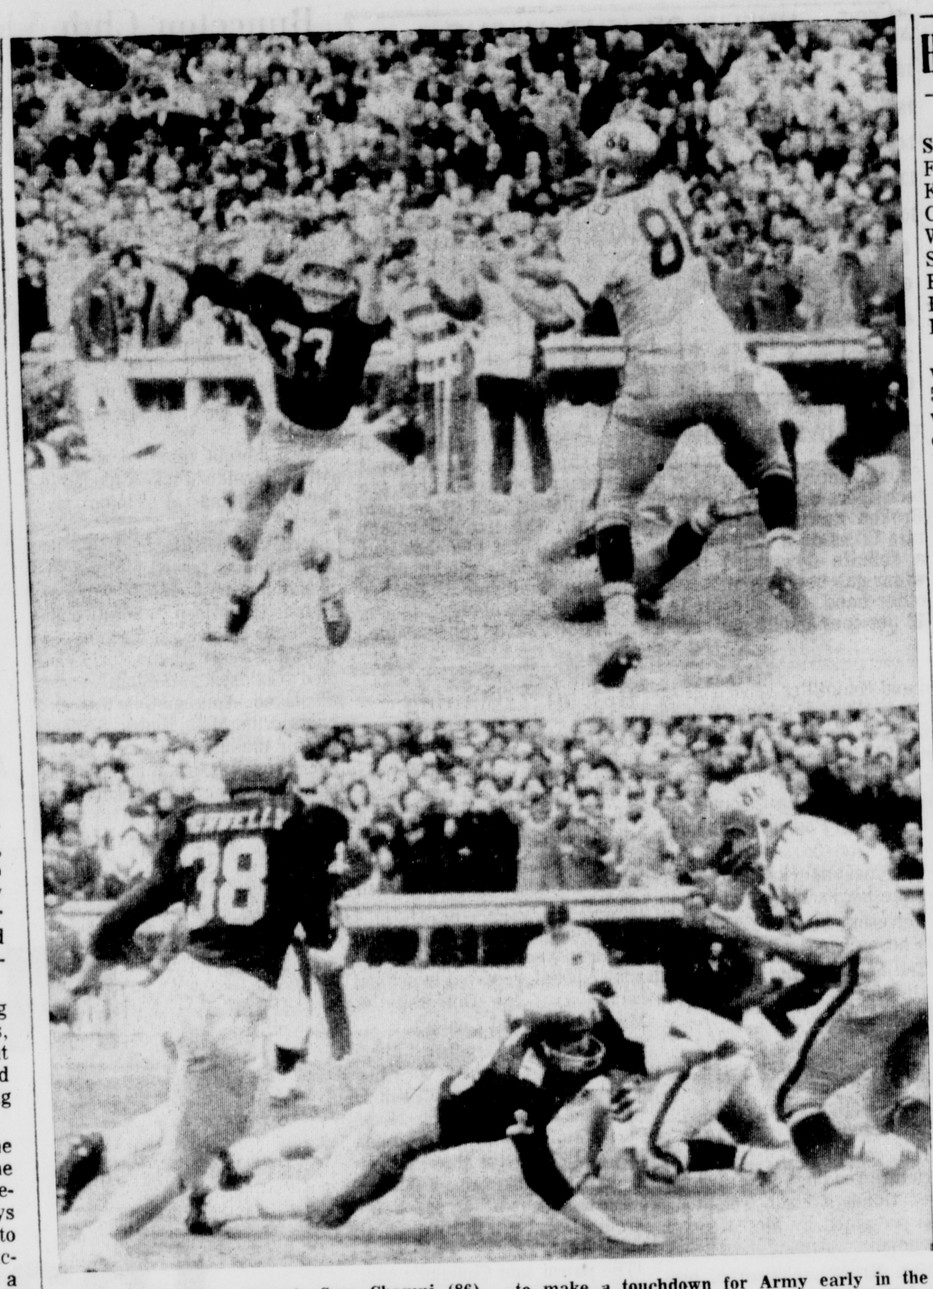
—o—

IT has been a week now since that sharp cold day at Columbia when the University of Kansas Jayhawkers took their beating from the University of Missouri Tigers. But some of the happenings in connection with fans who went to the game are still being discussed, especially those who went "prepared" for the cold weather.

Some, I have learned, took their sons' sleeping bags which they use on Boy Scout hikes, climbed into them, zipped them up and sat down to enjoy the game. Others carried heavy wool blankets, and others had paper sacks in which they inserted their feet — it worked too — others had those little gadgets known as hand warmers, but they weren't too effective.

But the best I heard was when Arlen Joy went over to Trooper Bill Southwick and asked to borrow a suit of his thermal underwear. From a very reliable source, he took it home and showed it to "Mickie" who immediately took possession as her warmth for the game — she didn't get cold either, according to her own report.

When it was returned to Trooper Southwick, he shook his head and remarked, "It's all out of shape now. I doubt if I can ever wear it again." Anyway their friends are having a big field day kidding, Arlen, "Mickie" and Bill.



SNARED PASS — Army's Sam Champi (86) snares a five-yard pass from cadet quarterback Carl Stinchweh as Middie fullback Curt Lindler (33) makes a vain attempt at a block, to make a touchdown for Army early in the second period of play Saturday. (UPI Telephoto)

Sonny Myers Takes On Two Assignments In Wrestling

Sonny Myers, a wrestling favorite in the Midlands, will have a twin assignment here Tuesday night when he first tries his hand in a grappling event and then dons the boxing gloves for a showdown with 300-pound Indian Joe.

The 234-pound Myers, several times Central States champion, will pair with the Lawman and Ron Reed in team action against Bob Geigel, Tom Brown and Indian Joe in wrestling feature.

Besides that task, Myers will try to make short work of the beefy Indian Joe in their scheduled five-rounder.

The bout was prompted by some roughing tactics Joe alleged Myers used when they last wrestled here. The Indian termed several of Myers' straight-arms as uppercuts and claimed he would rather resort to boxing with the gloves on.

Myers obliged and will try to offset Joe's weight advantage by throwing more punches packing more power.

Alliance of the Geigel-led roughing trio makes a formidable alliance Myers and his partners must contend with. Geigel is a veteran brawler who doesn't mind skirting the rules. Neither does either one of his partners.

Reed, the sensational young battler who is undefeated in the Midlands, figures to give Myers and the Lawman a big helping hand in the team clash. He has good speed, and is strong and agile.

,In separate wrestling tests, the Lawman is pitted against Brown and Reed will tangle with Geigel. Reed made a big impression in his first start here Nov. 17 and hopes to equal that showing against the cocky Geigel.

Adams To Be Honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Adams, now a successful trainer, will be honored at the annual dinner of the Thoroughbred Racing Association next Thursday. He will receive a trophy as one of eight jockeys who rode 3,000 or more winners.

During a 24-year riding career, which began at Riverside Park, Kansas City, the native of Iola, Kan., rode in 20,159 races and won 3,270 worth a total of $9,741,889 to the owners.

Johnny three times led the riders in winners. He was the 1937 champion and repeated in 1942 and 1953.

Vermont had a 1902 law requiring motorists to be preceded by someone afoot carrying a lighted lantern.

Two Are Returning

Tigers Will See Lettermen Back

The Smith-Cotton High School football team will see some two-year lettermen back on the battlefront come the 1956 football season along with some sophomores who lettered the past season. Prospects for the next season appear fairly good on the surface and if the younger players continue to improve, Sedalia's fans should be looking for some victory games on the better side of the ledger.

The Tigers lose eight lettermen, while ten juniors advance to the senior ranks and three sophomores to the junior ranks. This failed to show the coming material from the junior varsity and the freshmen group, of which there are a great number of good player prospects.

Although Smith-Cotton has some excellent backfield and quarterback material coming up, the Tigers are fortunate to have inherited a good back from the Jefferson City Jays. He is Tom Munson, whose parents recently moved here from the Capital City. Tom played the calling position on the Jays Freshman team.

Coach Dick Rees this week announced the boys who earned their letter "S" for this season.

On the varsity squad the following lettered: Lettered for two years, seniors, A. C. Byrd, halfback; Jim Johnson, fullback and twin brother John Johnson, quarterback; Steve Young, end and Con Rees, center. Letter this year only: John Arnest, tackle; Butch Turner, guard; and Tony Buckner, fullback. Juniors who have two letters: Jim Arnest, halfback; Russell Cusick, quarterback; Bill Herrick, tackle; and Jim Lewellen. One year junior lettermen: Fred Kelley, tackle; Joe Lamy, guard; Steve Long, end; Butch Rozier, and Dan Strombohm, halfbacks; and Mike Wells, guard. Three sophomores received their first letters: Ron Rees, center; Tony Murray, fullback; and Jim Vinson, end. The team manager Kerry Groepper, a senior, also earned his letter.

Junior Varsity lettermen are Juniors, Mike McKeever, halfback; Larry Myers, guard; Larry Scantlin, end; and Ed Vaughn, tackle. Ten Sophomores: John Boyd, John Dawson, Muriel Robinson, and Don Wright, all halfbacks; Larry Epperson and Cam Jennings, tackles; Ray Murray, and Roger Kahle, guards; Dick Postels, end; and Bill Schoenhard, quarterback.

The above football players will be presented their letters at the annual Recognition Assembly of the high school this spring.

Notre Dame Ends With 20-17 Upset

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Craig Fertig passed for two touchdowns in two minutes and 10 seconds of the final quarter Saturday, rallying Southern California to a fantastic 20-17 upset of Notre Dame, the nation's top-ranked college football team.

The startling upset wrecked the anticipated story-book finish of Notre Dame and Coach Ara Parseghian, who was lured from Northwestern to rebuild Notre Dame's football fortunes and had forged a 9-0 record and had the first Irish national championship in 15 years in sight.

The victory probably put Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl.

Notre Dame rolled along as expected for the first half, taking a 17-0 lead before Fertig got the Trojans started.

They picked up one touchdown in the third quarter and cut the lead to 13-17 in the fourth period when Fertig put together an 88-yard march, capped by a 23-yard pass to Fred Hill.

Moments later, Fertig hit Rod Sherman with another touchdown pass and the Trojans had it.

Stopped at nine straight was the Notre Dame string of triumphs in this, their miracle year, while the victory kept Southern Cal in the running for a trip to the Rose Bowl.

A vote by the Pacific Athletic Conference was to be tabulated and announced from San Francisco later Saturday night, with Oregon State and the other contender.

Oklahoma Downs Rival Cowboys

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Fumbling Oklahoma, frustrated by its own miscues for three periods scored twice in the final quarter Saturday and defeated traditional rival Oklahoma State for the 19th straight year, 21-16.

The Sooners, who will play Florida State in the Gator Bowl Jan. 2, lost five fumbles and gave up the ball once on a pass interception.

Three of the fumbles—at the Oklahoma State 13, 6 and 27—stopped Sooner drives. Another at the Oklahoma 38, set up an Oklahoma State field goal and the fifth, after Oklahoma had gone ahead 21-16, gave the Cowboys the ball at midfield with more than four minutes left.

Oklahoma State almost cashed in on the late opportunity but Tony Sallari dropped quarterback Glen Baxter's long fourth down pass after working his way into the clear at the 10 yard line.

After the teams played to a 7-7 deadlock in the first quarter, Oklahoma State's Charles Durkee warmed up his kicking toe and put the underdog Cowboys ahead 16-7 after three quarters on field goals of 28 and 29 yards.

But the Sooners aroused themselves in the final period and out together scoring drives of 64 and 82 yards. Quarterback Bobby Page passed to Ben Hart for both touchdowns, the first for 14 yards and the second for 65. Hart caught the long pass on a slant pattern and outran the secondary to the goal line.

With the victory, Oklahoma finished second in the Big Eight Conference with a 5-1-1 record and ended 6-3-1 over-all. Oklahoma State finished 3-4 in the conference and 3-7 for all games.

Magic Figure For Browns Remains Two

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

The magic number for the Cleveland Browns remains two with St. Louis still a distant threat in the Eastern Conference of the National Football League.

The Browns play their final home game Sunday against the unpredictable Philadelphia Eagles and the battered Cardinals will be in Pittsburgh to face the suddenly revived Steelers.

Baltimore, with the Western Conference crown clinched, plays at San Francisco. Other NFL pairings Sunday are Los Angeles at Minnesota, Green Bay at Dallas and New York at Washington. Chicago and Detroit, having played Thursday, are idle.

Both the Buffalo Bills and the San Diego Chargers, division leaders in the American Football League, have a day off after playing Thursday. In AFL Sunday action Boston is at Houston, Kansas City at New York and Oakland at Denver.

Cleveland had to come from behind to nip Philadelphia in their first meeting, 28-20. The running of Jim Brown, who made 104 yards rushing, and three touchdown passes by Frank Ryan did the job. The Browns report no new injuries after their 28-21 defeat by Green Bay.

Pittsburgh came through its 44-17 romp over the Giants in good physical condition.

Baltimore probably will have defensive back Jim Welch sit out another week with the title clinched. The 49ers likely have lost rookie quarterback George Mira for the season due to a shoulder separation. The Colts have won 10 straight, including a 37-7 romp over San Francisco.

Green Bay can't win the championship but it has a solid shot at second money with three games to go. Paul Hornung and Fuzzy Thurston still are sub par but probably will play against the cowboys who are without Don Perkins, Amos Marsh, Don Meredith and Tony Liscio.

Minnesota hopes to get Paul Flately back in action against the Rams in their fight to stay in the running for second place. Dick Bass and Frank Varrichione may miss their third straight for the Rams who have lost three of their last four. The Rams won in Los Angeles 22-13.

Boston just did beat Houston in their first meeting, 25-24 on a last-second field goal by Gino Cappelletti. The Patriots, winning three of their last four, still have a long shot chance of catching Bills.

First Touchdown Of Career Wins For Vanderbilt

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Senior halfback Bob Sullins scored the only touchdown of his college career Saturday to give Vanderbilt a 7-0 Southeastern Conference football victory over favored Tennessee.

It was the Commodores' first decision over the Volunteers since 1959.

Sullins' third quarter touchdown was set up by halfback Toby Wilt's 40-yard jaunt around right end, which carried to the Tennessee four.

Sullins hit right guard for two, then dived over the same spot again for the score.

Tennessee drove to the Vanderbilt one in the first half, but the Commodores held for four downs within the five-yard line. An earlier drive to the Commodore 13 stalled, and the field goal attempt was no good.

The victory was the first conference victory for Vanderbilt's Coach Jack Green in his two seasons.

HARD SCORE — Navy halfback Tom Leiser goes over the goal line, headfirst, from the one-yard-line in a desperate attempt to get the Middies back into the ballgame against Army's 8-0 lead in the first period. Leiser (25 with head down) went over with only 25 seconds left in the half, and set it up for Roger Staubach to tie the game with a pass to Phil Norton.

Michigan Is Picked As Top Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Michigan, with stars Cazzie Russell and Bill Buntin back, was picked Sunday as the top college basketball in the country in the pre-season poll by The Associated Press. The season opens Tuesday.

The Wolverines from Ann Arbor beat out UCLA's defending national champions by a mere 10 points in the voting by a 33-man panel of sports writers and broadcasters. UCLA was unbeaten last season, topping off its 30-0 slate with a 98-83 victory over Duke in the NCAA title game. Michigan, beaten by Duke 91-90 in the semifinals, finished third in the championship tournament, downing Kansas State 100-90.

Michigan gained 19 first-place votes and an over-all total of 302 points on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis. UCLA, which the experts probably feel will be hurt by the loss of All America Walt Hazzard, polled 12 first-place votes and 292 points over-all.

The Wolverines and the Bruins far outdistanced the rest of the field. Wichita, with Dave Stallworth eligible until February, was third with 113 points. Davidson, with big Fred Hetzel back, was fourth with 102 points.

Rounding out the Top Ten were Duke, Vanderbilt, Syracuse, Kansas State, San Francisco and St. John's of New York in that order.

Florida Ends With Victory Over Miami

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Sophomore Steve Spurrier roused Florida to a driving finish and a 12-10 football victory over Miami Saturday.

Spurrier triggered two touchdown drives in the fourth quarter on passes to end Charles Casey. When he got the Miami defense spread, he ran through the middle or called on Larry Dupree to smash through the Miami line.

Biletnikoff's own fumble one yard from the goal, forced Miami to settle for a 20-yard field goal by Don Cifra.

Dakota Wins First Bowl Game Crown

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — North Dakota State University won its first bowl victory in history here Saturday, defeating Western Colorado State 14-13 in the 16th annual Mineral Water Bowl football game.

Dakota's Bruce Airheart scored twice in the second period and Pierre DeCharme's extra points proved to be the difference as Western vainly fought back.

The Mountaineers of Colorado were plagued by penalties and nullification of a 70-yard touchdown scamper by Clyde Wilson after a clipping penalty.

After a scoreless first period, Airheart took a 6-yard pass from DeCharme for the first score of the game.

The Dakotans scored again with 9:03 to go in the first half, when Airheart cut around right end and zipped 43 yards. DeCharme's kick made it 14-0.

The Mountaineers got back into the game with only 50 seconds left in the half. Jim Novak tried to pass from his 35, and when no receivers were open, broke away to the Dakota 2-yard line before being brought down.

Two plays later, Clyde Wilson bowled over from the 1 and Norm Simmons booted the extra point to make the score 14-7 at the half.

Western held off the Dakotans in the second half and made their bid in the fourth quarter. Mac Singleton took a short Dakota punt at the Dakota 30 and ran back to the 17. Three plays later Novak found Wilson in the end zone on a 14-yard pass for the score. This was with 2:48 remaining in the game.

Novak went for the victory but his extra point pass fell short.

The loss was the first this season for the Colorado team in 10 starts. The Dakotans finished 10-1.

North Dakota, tri champion of the North Central Conference, outweighed their foes 20 pounds to the man, and kept control with a stiff ground game.

Ed Pfilipsen of North Dakota was the top gainer with 106 yards in 24 carries Bruce Airheart ran for 76 yards in 13 carries.

New College Team Off To Good Start

NEOSHO, Mo. (AP) — There may be a new sun rising on the national junior college basketball horizon.

The Crowder College Roughriders, representing a band new college opened this fall to serve Newton and McDonald counties, are off to an amazing start with four victories in five starts, including a stunning upset of one of the nation's top JUCO teams.

Crowder opened its court season Nov. 13 with a 73-50 victory over Ozark Bible College at Joplin. The Roughriders stormed past Northeastern Oklahoma State junior varsity, 86-59, and then won their third straight and made a bid for national recognition by downing the Bacone, Okla., Warriors, 59-50. Bacone was the No. 3 team in the national junior college tournament last season.

Last Monday the Roughriders were defeated, 80-73 by Lindsey-Wilson of Kentucky at the annual Moberly Junior College tournament, but came back to down Lincoln, Ill., 78-67.

Sparking the team is Warren Smith, nicknamed "Wonderful Warren," of Wilmerding, Pa., who has averaged 24.4 points a game.

Head coach of the new team is Bob Sneller, who coached national powerhouses at Independence, Kan., for eight years. His Kansas team was ranked No. 1 in 1960 and it won the national championship in 1963, the year Sneller was named Coach of the Year by the National Junior College Athletic Association.

Cancels Appearance

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Mrs. John F. Kennedy canceled Saturday what was to be her first major public appearance since the end of her year-long period of mourning the death of her husband.

Mrs. Kennedy was to have been guest of honor at $5,000-a-couple fund-raising dinner for the Cedars-Sinai Medical Center next Wednesday night in Beverly Hills.

But a member of the dinner committee disclosed Saturday that Mrs. Kennedy had sent her regrets, saying she did not feel physically up to attending due to the emotional strain of the last 10 days.

Beavers From Oregon To Rose Bowl

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Despite Southern California's 20-17 upset victory over No. 1-ranked Notre Dame, Oregon State's Beavers were named Saturday to battle the University of Michigan in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., New Year's Day.

It took two hours to complete the voting from the faculty representatives for athletics from each of the eight member schools in the Pacific Athletic Conference, indicating a close vote between the two teams who share the conference championship with 3-1 records.

It might even have been a 4-4 tie vote, because conference rules would then give the nod to Oregon State since USC was in the 1963 bowl and Oregon State had not been there since 1957.

The Beavers had the better over-all record with 8-2 against 7-3 for the Trojans.

Oregon State lost its opener with Northwestern 7-3 and then won seven straight before Stanford won a 16-7 conference upset.

The Beavers lost to Iowa 35-19 in the 1957 Rose Bowl.

Georgia Tech Accepts Offer For Sun Bowl

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — The amazing Georgia Bulldogs wrote a storybook ending to the football season by beating Georgia Tech 7-0 Saturday and accepting a bid to play in the Sun Bowl.

Even though the final score was close, Tech was never in the ball game as the Bulldogs controlled the contest offensively and beat the Yellow Jackets at their own game of defense.

Georgia scored its touchdown with 3:27 left in the third period when quarterback Preston Ridlehuber bulled his way through the Tech line from three yards out.

That Georgia drive started on the Tech 21 when Yellow Jacket fullback Jeff Davis fumbled after being tackled viciously by Pat Hunnicutt and the Bulldogs' John Glass recovered.

Three plays later the Bulldogs went on the scoreboard — the touchdown being set up on a 16-yard pass from Ridlehuber to Leon Armbrester.

Four of Seven Tunnel Artists Are Recaptured

COLFAX, Wash. (AP) — Four of the seven escape artists who tunneled out of Washington State Penitentiary Sunday have been recaptured — two of them in Idaho, one in Oregon and one in Washington.

Arthur St. Peter, 39, of Seattle, serving a sentence as an habitual criminal at the Walla Walla institution, was apprehended late Friday while dozing in a stolen truck near this eastern Washington town.

Colfax is about 70 miles northeast of Walla Walla, but St. Peter is known to have driven to the Portland, Ore., area, about 200 miles west of Walla Walla, with the other convicts after their escape.

Neil C. Wallen, 28, a convicted murderer from Spokane, Wash., was arrested earlier Friday at a Portland hotel after police received a telephoned tip. A man believed to be escapee Donald Maseros, 24, also a convicted killer, fled.

Harold Oscar Thomas, 40, and Richard Eugene Loux, 29, were arrested at a roadblock near Payette, Idaho, Tuesday night and are being held in Caldwell, Idaho, pending removal hearings. Two men ran from the escapees' car and got away.

Still missing are Maseros, John Mullenix, 33, and Vertis James Barrett, 35.

Apology From Egyptians For Destruction

CAIRO (AP) — The Egyptian government apologized Saturday for the destructive Thanksgiving Day foray made by African students on the U. S. Embassy in protest against U. S.-Belgian operations in the Congo.

In a note delivered to U. S. Ambassador Lucius Battle, the Egyptians also agreed to negotiate compensation for the burned John F. Kennedy Library and damage to other buildings and automobiles — unofficially estimated at a quarter of a million dollars.

An embassy spokesman said the Egyptian deputy prime minister for foreign affairs, Mahmoud Fawzi, "on behalf of his government extended a statement of apology and expressed deep pain over the incident."

The text of the note was not released, but the embassy spokesman said the note "expressed willingness to enter into negotiations" over compensation.

This is normal diplomatic practice in such instances, an embassy official said.

Dog Becomes Hog

MANDAN, N.D. (AP) — How many miles can 80 hogs and a dog log?

In the case of Rex and his snorting companions, it was a 1,223-mile rail trip to the West Coast. You can double the mileage for Rex, who came back in better style than he went.

He was helping his master, Northern Pacific stockyards foreman Nels Nelson, load a stock car with hogs Nov. 18. Rex chased the hogs into the car and was still there when Nelson sealed the door.

Later, Nelson missed Rex but it wasn't until two days later he knew for sure what had happened. A telegram from Spokane advised that 80 hogs and one dog had arrived. Railroad men fed and watered Tex, then put him on the NP's mainstreeter — a passenger train — for the return trip.

Rex arrived back home in time for Thanksgiving—"a very happy dog," said Nelson.

3 Bandits Leave Store Without Loot

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Three jittery would-be robbers before business hours, herded almost a dozen employes into a walk-in refrigerator, but fled without touching several thousand dollars virtually placed in their hands by an armored truck money service messenger.

One store employe was struck behind the left ear with a pistol wielded by one of the men but was not seriously injured.

The story, as related to police by the store manager, David Porter:

The three men, well - dressed and carrying nickel - plated pistols, apparently entered through a delivery truck doorway.

One walked to the front and, while other employes were being herded into the refrigerator, began talking with Richard Pittman, produce manager.

The armored car stopped in front and the messenger entered, handing Pittman a package of several thousand dollars.

The messenger, Louis Greeno, was unaware of anything amiss and left. Pittman placed the money near the store's office, then the trio of gunmen suddenly sped out the back door. The manager's belief was that the gunmen mistook the messenger for a police officer.

A bread truck driver called police and Greeno later said the first he knew of the robbery attempt was when he picked up the police report on his truck radio several blocks from the grocery store.

A resident of the area later notified police of finding a revolver in the nighborhood of the store and a car stolen from a used car lot was found abandoned on the grocery parking lot. Whether the incidents were connected to the attempted robbery was not known.

Bloody Week in Congo

Belgian Paratroopers Came Too Late for Many Victims

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Out of the dawn-brightened sky, Belgian paratroopers began jumping over the airport on the outskirts of Stanleyville. The rebellion in the northeastern Congo had reached its climax.

But the paratroopers were already too late to save some of the hundreds of whites held hostage for weeks or months by the rebels of Christophe Gbenye's "Congolese People's Republic."

Chanting "kill, kill" in Swahili, the rebels opened indiscriminate fire on hundreds of whites forced to mass in front of the Victoria Hotel. One of the first to fall was Dr. Paul E. Carlson, 36, of Rolling Hills, Calif., a medical missionary the rebels had condemned two weeks earlier as an "American spy."

By the weekend, new horror reports from the northeastern Congo raised the number of white hostages slain during the week to 97 known dead. Forty-five mutilated, and possibly cannibalized, bodies were found in Stanleyville's African quarter, and unofficial reports by white refugees said another 45 whites may have been slain in the remote village of Wamba.

The Congo drama began with the paratroop drop Tuesday.

By noon on that grim Tuesday, the troopers and a Congolese force led by white mercenaries had captured Stanleyville. More than 800 whites, mostly Europeans, were rescued.

Michael P. E. Hoyt, 35, the American consul at Stanleyville, freed from weeks of virtual arrest, told of his aides being beaten and forced to eat an American flag, of hearing rebels discuss what parts of the bodies of white hostages they would eat.

The Belgian paratroopers, carried again in U.S. Air Force planes, repeated their mission Thursday, dropping at dawn on the town of Paulis, 225 miles northeast of Stanleyville.

Here 211 white hostages were rescued, but it was again too late for 21 Belgians and one American, the Rev. Joseph W. Tucker, 45, of Lamar, Ark. He was slowly beaten to death in public, beginning Tuesday night, while others were hacked to pieces with machetes. The Rev. Mr. Tucker had spent 26 years in missionary work in the Congo.

In some parts of Africa, and throughout the Communist world, there was strong reaction to the intervention. In Cairo, a mob burned the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library, and damaged other parts of U.S. Embassy property. There were demonstrations in Prague and Nairobi, and in Moscow there were the usual staged protests. As if from nowhere, the signs popped up: "Hands Off the Congo," "Shame to the imperialists—U.S.A., Britain and Belgium." Red China said that it would take "all possible measures to aid the rebels."

It was clear the Congo would continue to be a hot spot, but most of the white hostages had been freed.

There were other tragedies, elsewhere in the world, but not premeditated ones.

Late Wednesday night, the pearly white ocean liner Shalom, pride of Israel's merchant fleet, sailed out of New York Harbor with 616 passengers bound for a West Indies cruise. At the same time a gray-hulled tanker, the 583-foot Stolt Dagali out of Oslo, Norway, was plowing through a heavy sea headed for Newark, N.J., with a cargo of fats and solvents.

At 2:20 a.m. Thursday, in a thick fog 25 miles southeast of Asbury Park, N.J., the ships collided. The liner knifed through the tanker, shearing off the stern section, which sank quickly. In one terrifying moment, 33 members of the tanker's crew of 43 were pitched into the sea or clambered frantically around lifeboats.

Throughout the morning, helicopters and coast guard cutters picked up survivors. The Shalom, a 40-foot gash in her bow, limped back to her pier in New York, the cruise canceled. Of the tanker's crew, 19 men were killed.

And at Rome's airport a Boeing 707 jet, TWA's flight No. 800-22, roared down the runway bound for Athens and Cairo. Suddenly the plane faltered, skidded 1,500 feet and exploded into flames. The time was 2 p.m. Monday, of the 73 passengers and crew members aboard, 46 died, including 27 Americans.

A year and a day after President John F. Kennedy was murdered, the commission that investigated the assassination released all the testimony it had taken.

For the first time Jacqueline Kennedy's version of her husband's death was disclosed.

"My husband never made any sound. He had this sort of quizzical look on his face and then he — put his hands to his forehead and fell in my lap," Mrs. Kennedy said.

The commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren had already released a summary of its findings in a lengthy volume in September, but the 26 volumes made public during the week gave sometimes fascinating, sometimes horrifying form to one of the great tragedies of American history.

The rumors had been there: The pound sterling was in trouble. To quiet the talk, Britain's new Labor government directed the Bank of England to raise its interest rates to 7 per cent to stem the outflow of money. Still there was talk of possible devaluation. Then Thursday there was a dramatic $3-billion rescue package put together by the United States and the central banks of 10 other nations.

"We want to tell the speculators that we have more money than they have," said one Paris banker.

William O'Dwyer, an Irish immigrant who rose to be a general in the U.S. Army, mayor of New York City and ambassador to Mexico, died Tuesday in a New York hospital, at 74, of a coronary thrombosis. He had entered the hospital the previous night.

Quotes of the week:

"I have enlisted in this war for the duration." — Maxwell D. Taylor, U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam.

"We cannot, and will not, permit the FBI to be used to superimpose the aims of those who would sacrifice the very foundations on which our government rests." — J. Edgar Hoover.

People In The News

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (AP) — Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late president, celebrated her seventh birthday Friday at a small party at her family's country home on Long Island Sound. Several cousins attended.

WASHINGTON (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover is quoted as saying that his recent news conference may have been his last.

The FBI chief was highly critical of Dr. Martin Luther King at the extraordinary news conference Nov. 18.

"I'm going to get writer's cramp from answering all those messages," Hoover said, according to Betty Beale, staff writer for the Washington Evening Star.

She said Friday he told her at a party that he enjoyed the news conference with women reporters. "But I think it will be my last," he was quoted as having said.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Alex Quaison-Sackey, Ghana's ambassador to the United Nations, is assured the presidency of the U.N. General Assembly session opening Tuesday.

The African group of 33 delegations unanimously chose him Friday night. This is Africa's turn in the presidency.

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Nikita Khrushchev is living near Moscow and "beginning to do what he always planned to do when he retired," says Sergei Mikoyan. He is a son of Anastas Mikoyan, president of the Soviet Union.

He said Friday that Khrushchev, ousted Soviet premier, spends a lot of time hunting. "He's in fine shape," he said.

Mikoyan, 36, spent Thanksgiving Day at the farm home of industrialist Cyrus Eaton, near Akron.

Stay of Execution For Latham, York

WASHINGTON (AP)—James Douglas Latham and George R. York, scheduled to be hanged in the Kansas State Penitentiary at Lansing next Wednesday, have been granted a stay of execution.

Justice Byron R. White of the Supreme Court granted the stay Friday, to remain effective pending the filing of a new appeal on behalf of the condemned men.

Latham and York were convicted in Kansas in 1961 for the slaying that year of Otto Zeigler, a railroad worker near Wallace, Kan.

The Supreme Court three times previously has denied hearings to the pair. In the latest appeal, their counsel raised the question they were deprived of effective aid of an attorney after their arrest.

First Medal Of Honor In Viet Nam

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The first veteran of Viet Nam to be recommended for the Medal of Honor kept on fighting although twice wounded during a Communist night assault and stopped for first aid only when warned he might die from loss of blood.

The heroism of Capt. Roger Hugh Donlon, 30, of Saugerties, N.Y., was described Friday by Lt. Julian M. Olejniczak at the Army's special forces center at Ft. Bragg. Donlon was on leave.

Lt. Olejniczak was with Donlon when the Viet Cong tried to overrun their jungle outpost. He said Donlon kept moving about "when raising your head was like suicide."

"He stopped for treatment only when he was warned that he might die from loss of blood," Olejniczak recalled. "By that time reinforcements had arrived."

The barrage of mortar and machinegun fire broke the jungle silence July 6 about 2:30 a.m. Two American soldiers and at least 55 Communist guerrillas died in the ensuing battle.

Olejniczak, executive officer at the camp at Nam Dong, said he and Sgt. Gabriel Alamo were with Spec. 5 Michael Disser at his mortar position near the heaviest action. Alamo was killed there.

He said Capt. Donlon and two other U.S. military advisors returned to the mortar pit "in time to save us from certain death.

"We were all wounded, and the Viet Cong were still coming in. We fired into the enemy flank, killing 20 to 30. Disser and I couldn't walk, so we crawled out to a nearby trench."

Capt. Donlon told Olejniczak to cover him from the trench while he went back to the mortar pit to see whether he could help the two mortally wounded men. Sgt. John Houston was the other American killed there.

"He couldn't help them, but he brought back a recoilless rifle and was wounded again," Olejniczak said. "He had been hit earlier in the fight and then he again exposed himself to search for a radio.

"He found one and began directing the planes. In time the Viet Cong had enough and the attack began to diminish."

Routs Burglars From His Service Station

POTOSI, Mo. (AP) — A service station operator armed with a 30-06 deer rifle routed three men who had broken into his service station early Saturday.

A short time later three suspects were apprehended at a roadblock set up by Potosi police and Washington County sheriff's officers.

State trooper Don Daughty identified the suspects as Donald Richards, 22, Kenneth Ray Richards, 18, and George Elmer Kay, 18, all of Washington County. Daughty said they recently were released from the Missouri Department of Corrections at Jefferson City.

The three were driving a car which had been stolen in St. Louis, Daughty said. They were jailed at Potosi for arraignment later Saturday.

The attempted burglary was at the Pine Valley service station three miles south of Potosi on Highway 21.

Swift Action To Tighten Money Supply

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Britain, the United States and Canada took swift and drastic action during the week to tighten the money supply.

Britain started the ball rolling by jumping its discount rate from 5 to 7 per cent to protect the wavering pound. The United States followed suit with a raise from 3½ to 4 per cent. Canada was next with a boost from 4 to 4½ per cent.

In another action, the United Kingdom and 11 other nations, including the United States, made $3 billion available to bolster the pound.

The U.S. Federal Reserve Board aid its action on the discount rate was taken "to maintain the international strength of the dollar."

The discount rate is the amount of interest charged by central banks — in the United States it's the Federal Reserve — to member banks.

The stock market, which doesn't approve of high interest rates, declined after the Federal Reserve action.

Other immediate repercussions were not severe.

Some bankers predicted that the discount rate advance would bring an increase in the prime rate of banks, currently 4½ to 5 per cent. The prime rate is the charge for loans to customers with the highest credit rating.

The Federal Reserve also allowed banks to raise the interest rate they pay on savings deposits to 4 per cent. In New York, the First National City Bank and the Chase Manhattan Bank announced they would do so, effective Jan. 1. Other banks around the country were expected to follow.

Apprehension was expressed in some quarters, including the AFL-CIO Executive Council, that the discount rate boost would bring the business expansion to a premature end.

Administration officials, however, contended that the raise would cause no significant economic disruptions.

Labor peace returned during the week to the automobile industry, where strikes against General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. have spread over two months. The last of the local-level strikes against Ford was settled.

Output for the week was estimated at 152,200 cars, down from 158,911 the previous week but ahead of the 148,836 turned out a year ago.

Chrysler and Ford reported record mid-November sales while General Motors sales were recovering from the month-long strike. Chrysler dealers delivered 40,482 cars in the second 10 days of the month, up 25 per cent from 32,271 a year earlier. Ford sold 72,354 cars, a 2 per cent gain from 71,104 a year before.

Steel production during the week posted a slight gain after two weeks of decline. Output of 2,634,000 tons was just under 1 per cent ahead of the previous week. For the year to date production totaled 112,691,000 tons, up 14 per cent fro mthe like 1963 period.

Thanksgiving Day wasn't a holiday for many steelworkers as the mills labored to turn out steel to meet the heavy demands.

The threat of a national railroad strike was deferred for at least one week when three off-train unions agreed to continue negotiations at the request of Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz. Earlier, eight other shop unions had signed three-year contracts with the railroads.

On another labor front, West Coast pulp and paper companies reached an agreement with the striking Association of Western Pulp & Paper Workers. The strike, which began Nov. 12, had idled 21,000 workers at 48 manufacturing plants.

The $10-a-ton newsprint price cut announced last week by McMillan, Bloedell & Powell River, Ltd., a Canadian producer, spread. Crown Zellerbach Corp., another big Western producer, cut its price and some smaller papermakers, including Publishers Paper Co. and West Tacoma Newsprint Co., went along.

The Federal Communications Commission announced the biggest cut in long-distance telephone rates in history. It will reduce interstate revenues of the Bell System by about $100 million annually.

About 75 per cent of the reductions will become effective Feb. 1 and the rest on or before April 1.

To Build Staff Slowly

Seek More Funds to Aid In Probation of Convicts

By GEORGE SITTERLEY
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The State Board of Probation and Parole is asking for a half million dollar increase in appropriations in an effort to put more men on low-cost probation instead of high-cost incarceration.

In this waning two-year fiscal period, the board has an appropriation of $1,215,932 to finance the supervision of nearly 3,000 convicts. It has asked for $1,705,584 for the biennium beginning next July 1.

In its report for operations in the 1963-64 fiscal year, the board said its request was justified by what had been done. The cost of supervising 2,718 parolees or probationers during the year amounted to $573,000. But if they had been kept behind bars the cost would have been $4,634,190.

Besides, the board estimated, the men and women on probation or parole earned an estimated $7,899,500, paid taxes on it or on their purchases and, in many cases, took their families off of welfare rolls.

George N. Elder, chairman of the three-man board, said the present effort is to build up the supervisory staff slowly, provide in-service training and increase salaries wherever possible to attract and hold the career type officers.

"We'll have to increase pay to keep the quality of men we need for the job," Elder said. "Missouri's specifications for parole officers are among the highest in the central states and the pay scale is among the lowest."

Now the staff of supervisory officers each has a work load of about 121 cases. But that is about double the ideal caseload to give each parolee the kind of supervision that will reduce to the minimum the possibility of his getting into new trouble and winding up in prison again because of a parole violation or the commission of a new crime.

The board is not trying to reach the optimum in a crash program because it would be impossible.

Elder said a qualified parole officer is a little bit special and not easily found. Once found he must be given training and must be protected with the sort of job security and salary that will induce him to stay and to do a good job.

Instead, the board hopes to reach its best working level in another four years. If it does, it will be able to give close supervision to the present number of parolees plus, perhaps, some of the marginal convicts who could be released if supervisory help was available.

If it became necessary to confine the 2,700 convicts who were on parole last year, the board's report said, it would require four prisons such as the medium security institution at Moberly and lust to build them would cost $40 million.

But it's not just a matter of economics, Elder said.

"Our basis responsibility is one to society — not to release a man unless he has a good chance of making it with proper supervision," Elder said.

As the staff has been increased slowly, he pointed out, there has been an increase in the number of bench paroles, or probation cases, plus another increase in the number of pre-sentence investigations made by parole officers for the sentencing judges.

Actually, the board chairman said, the correctional department prison population has been remaining about stable or dropping slowly while the number of convicted persons who are on parole has been rising.

Elder said he didn't know whether he would remain on the board after the state administration changes in January but he hoped the board's program would continue to improve.

"We don't think we're doing the job that can be done now but we think we're moving in the right direction" he said.

Washington Capsules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators have had a talk with insurance man Don B. Reynolds in preparation for the reopening of the Bobby Baker hearings next week.

Reynolds, a key witness in the earlier hearings on the business activities of the former Senate employe, spent 2½ hours Friday being questioned by the staff of the Senate Rules Committee.

Lennox P. McLendon, special counsel to the committee, declined to say what Reynolds was questioned about but said he had provided new information on some documents.

Reynolds was accompanied by Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., who helped force the new round of hearings by charging in a Senate speech that Reynolds channeled a $25,000 kickback from contractor Matthew J. McCloskey to Baker for the 1960 Kennedy-Johnson election campaign.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will talk over its differences with Cambodia at a meeting in New Delhi Dec. 7.

Philip W. Bonsal from the State Department policy planning staff is being sent to India to represent the United States in the talks.

Cambodia has charged the United States with violating its frontiers by helping South Viet Nam forces chase Viet Cong guerrillas into Cambodian territory.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The January draft call for the Army is for 5,400 men. That's down from the December call of 7,800 men and brings to 3,010,350 the total of men drafted since September 1950.

Little Rebel Support

Revolt Internal Movement To Get Power for Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American who was rescued from the Congo rebels says their revolt is an internal movement aimed chiefly at winning power and material gain for the leaders.

Michael Hoyt, who was U.S. consul at Stanleyville until Belgian paratroopers saved him from almost certain execution this week, found little support for the rebels among the populace.

"But they had guns," he added at a news conference Friday.

Hoyt, 35, of Chicago, and four other staff members of the U.S. Consulate spent 52 days in the hands of the rebels.

"They intended to use us as a shield — as hostages — in the event of an attack on Stanleyville," he said.

The Americans were beaten with rifle butts, sticks and bayonets, jailed with criminals, and forced to eat an American flag, said Hoyt.

"Actually, we couldn't eat it, it was made of too durable material," added David K. Grinwis, the vice consul, who took part in the news conference. Grinwis, 35, is from Maplewood, N.J.

Despite such treatment, Hoyt said he did not think the revolt was aimed particularly at whites or the United States.

"Anti-Americanism was more for propaganda purposes," Hoyt said.

He said he had seen no evidence of Communist Chinese influence on the rebel leaders and felt their revolt was essentially "an internal movement, though not unsupported from the outside."

Boone Plans TV Series In Hawaii

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "It's the hardest thing in the world to convince the networks that a television series can be made entirely in Hawaii," said Richard Boone. "Those boys think the natives still wear rings in their noses."

But Boone is a resolute man, and he intends to realize his dream of bringing a full-scale movie operation to the 50th state.

His opening wedge: A television series in color to star — Richard Boone.

"Naturally I'd have to be in it, so I can sell it to the networks," said the veteran of three series. "I don't mind. I spent a lot of years building up this name. I might as well cash in on it."

The series would be the beginning of what he hopes will be a self-sustaining tropical Hollywood. Last week he entertained Hawaiian backers of his proposed two-stage studio and had them inspect facilities at CBS' television center which would serve as prototypes. The moneymen are willing, said Boone, and he expects to be making an announcement about building.

"After we get the series rolling, we'll go after feature production," he said. "This year there were seven features shot in Hawaii —four Americans and three Japanese. Our stages would be mighty attractive to producers."

A home town boy, Boone left the city of his birth last summer to take up permanent residence in Hawaii. The results have exceeded his hopes, he remarked.

The actor has returned for a film role, starring with Charlton Heston in a medieval epic, "War Lord." He has mixed feelings about the assignment.

"I was thinking it was the longest project I've ever been on when Chuck Heston happend to remark that it was going the fastest of any picture he remembers. Then I realized our points of view. He was thinking in terms of 'Ben-Hur' and 'The Ten Commandments' and I was narking to television schedules."

World News Glimpses

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Accusations by Syria and Israel that the other was to blame for the Nov. 13-14 border clashes prompted Britain's new chief delegate Lord Caradan to urge marking the frontier.

Caradan, the former Sir Hugh Foot, also told the U.N. Security Council Friday that the Israel-Syria mixed armistice commission should be restored as "practical steps to prevent any such violent and dangerous explosions in the future."

Gen. Odd Bull of Norway, chief of the U.N. truce supervision organization for Palestine, said heavy firing erupted on both sides after a single shot was fired from Syria toward an Israeli armored personnel carrier on an Israeli-built road which Syria says intrudes into Syrian territory.

GANGTOK, Sikkim State (AP) — An announcement by King Jigme Wangchuk of Bhutan, assuming all powers and dismissing acting prime minister Lhendup Dorji, was received here Saturday.

PARIS (AP) — U.S. Undersecretary of State George W. Ball arrived here Saturday for talks on the Atlantic alliance.

Ball will meet with French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville next week in the first high-level contact between French and American officials since the American presidential elections Nov. 3. High among the likely subjects for discussion are nuclear questions of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the European Common Market.

COPENHAGEN (AP) — The "hot line" between the White House and the Kremlin was interrupted briefly Friday — by a bulldozer.

Danish Postmaster General Gunnar Pedersen said the machine grading a local road cut the vital teletype cable. He said connections were re-established almost immediately by means of a microwave chain kept in reserve.

Mrs. Virgil Edman Meredith

Suzanne Marie Robenolt Weds Mr. Virgil Edman Meredith

St. John the Evangelist Roman Catholic Church, Binghampton, N.Y., was decorated with bronze and gold chrysanthemums and carnations for the one o'clock Saturday afternoon, Nov. 14, wedding of Miss Suzanne Marie Robenolt and Mr. Virgil Edman Meredith. The Rev. Dennis Hartnett officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard F. Robenolt, Binghampton, N.Y. Mr. and Mrs. Russell R. Meredith, Route 4, are parents of the bridegroom.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk organza, fashioned with a Chantilly lace bodice, Sabrina neckline and long tapered sleeves. Embroidered appliques of lace trimmed the front of her floor length skirt, which featured a tiered back, ending in a chapel train.

A crown of aurora borealis crystal held her elbow length veil. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, centered with a white orchid with accents of ribbon and fern.

Miss Carole Ann Mitchell, maid of honor, wore a street length gown of iridescent copper, styled with a scoop neckline, tapered long sleeves and detachable overskirt. Her headpiece was a matching cabbage rose. She carried gold and white carnations.

Attired alike, bridesmaids were Miss Jeanne Robenolt, sister of the bride, Miss Lucille MacDermott and Miss Ruby Meredith, the latter a sister of the bridegroom.

Flower girl was Miss Tobby Gail Reese.

Wedding bands were carried to the altar by Master Christopher Reese.

The bridegroom chose his brother, Mr. William Meredith as best man. Groomsmen were Mr. Lawrence Meredith, brother of the bridegroom, Mr. Ronald Robenolt, brother of the bride. Mr. Ralph M. Salmon and Mr. Richard Strom, a cousin of the bride, were ushers.

Endwell House was the setting for an afternoon reception, attended by 130 guests.

The bride was graduated from Susquehanna Valley High School and is employed by Security Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. The bridegroom, a graduate of Missouri School of Mines and Metallurgy, Rolla, where he received his bachelor of science degree in physics, is an employe of International Business Machine, Endicott, N.Y.

After a two week trip through New England and Missouri, the couple will be at home at 3626 Lott Street, Endwell, N.Y.

Fricke-Homan Vows are Said Thanksgiving

Marriage vows were exchanged at 11 o'clock Thanksgiving morning, Nov. 26, at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, by Miss Lois Virginia Fricke and Mr. Todd Terrill Homan, in the presence of their families.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Walter F. Strickert, pastor. Organ selections were played by Miss Mildred Brackman.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. George Herman Fricke, 504 South Grand, and the late Caroline Muntzel Fricke. Mr. Homan is the son of Mrs. Mark F. Homan and the late Mr. Homan, and the brother of Mrs. William Ward, 2503 Kay Avenue.

Attendants were Mrs. Harold L. Fricke and Mr. William Ward.

A reception for the wedding party and the family members was held after the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Fricke, 239 South Park. Presiding at the bridal table were Mrs. William Sutton and Mrs. Kenneth D. Emery, nieces of the bride.

Until her marriage the bride owned and operated Qwik Stenographic Service. The bridegroom is associated with the Chillicothe Constitution-Tribune. The couple will be at home at 1315 Dorney, Chillicothe, after a wedding trip.

How Bad Is Patient?

GOP Not Apt To Crumple During Its Internal Fight

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the aftermath of defeat, will the Republican party splinter on the rocks of ideology and disappear like the Whigs? Not likely, for politics is the art of compromise, but a battle is shaping up and the first skirmish may come this week when GOP governors meet to survey the wreckage.

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four years ago, after Richard M. Nixon had lost the White House by the narrowest of margins, Republicans were fretting over who should lead their party.

Many voted for Nixon, but Sen. Barry Goldwater wasn't among them.

"Until he gets elected to some position, he's just going to be a Republican lawyer," Goldwater said of Nixon. "I look back at history and even the ex-presidents haven't been able to retain a hold on the party."

Once again Republicans are fighting over leadership.

And here is Goldwater, though buried under an avalance of votes for Lyndon B. Johnson, saying: "I will have a lot of time to devote to this party, to its leadership, and to the strengthening of the party, and that I have every intention of doing."

This was formally seconded by Dean Burch, the man Goldwater picked for Republican national chairman, and by Denison Kitchel, the senator's campaign manager.

"The opportunities before us are great," Burch said, after surveying the wreckage. "I think we should count our blessings."

"We have to wait four years," Kitchel said, "but we're going to get this government back where it belongs."

This determination of the losers to keep the party in the hands of Barry Goldwater and his conservative supporters gives unusual zest and meaning to a meeting of GOP governors next Friday and Saturday at Denver.

Gov. Robert E. Smylie of Idaho, a leader in the Burch-must-go movement and chairman of the Governor's Conference, says the meeting was planned long before the election. But it no longer appears routine, and it may provide insights to these problems:

Will the Republican party splinter on the rocks of ideology and disappear like the Whig party it supplanted over a century ago?

Or will it find a compromise between what looks to be irreconcilable factions? If so, how? Which way will it lean?

Toward Goldwater, whose followers are the most dedicated of any Republican leader?

Toward Nixon, who acts like a man eager for combat again?

Gov. George Romney, who survived a Republican debacle in Michigan?

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, whose voice is amplified by New York's fat 43 electoral votes?

Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois and Rep. Charles Halleck of Indiana, who lead the loyal, though depleted, opposition in Congress?

Toward Smylie, who in a time of troubles found sunshine in Idaho?

"We increased our margins both in the State Senate and the House," Smylie said. "I feel like a guy who has bowled 300."

What eventually happens is of concern not only to Republicans, but to all citizens. The Founding Fathers didn't plan it this way, but the nation now depends on two lively, alert forces, each charting the course it thinks the nation should take, each jabbing at the other's weaknesses, real and imaginary.

Since the election such a torrent of interviews, recriminations, diagnoses, affirmations and doubts has poured out that the basic question has been inundated: How badly was the patient hurt?

One could leave Bangor, Maine, travel to El Paso, Tex., and never pass through a state that hadn't given 60 per cent or more of its popular vote to Johnson.

Sixty per cent is considered a landslide. Preliminary figures show Johnson won 25 states and the District of Columbia by that decisive margin.

The vote for Johnson—or against Goldwater—shows astonishing changes from 1960.

In 1960 Nixon racked up Ohio's 25 electoral votes easily, with John F. Kennedy getting only 46.7 per rent of the total. Despite fears of a backlash vote on civil rights, Johnson swept Ohio by 63 per cent.

Vermont had never gone Democratic in a presidential election, and grudgingly gave Kennedy 41.3 per cent of its vote. Johnson won with 66 per cent.

Of the 26 states Nixon won in 1960, Goldwater took only one—his native Arizona. Five states in deepest Dixie, stirred by civil rights arguments, saved Goldwater from complete rout.

Take Congress.

In the Senate, Republicans are at as low an ebb as at any time since 1940, with 32 out of 100. In the House, where Democrats now lead 295-140, Republicans must go back to 1936 and Alf Landon for a more dismal showing.

Governors present the one bright spot. Republicans have 17, a net gain of one. But even here the cheering must be subdued.

Republican losses among the 7,600 members of state legislatures have reached around 490.

But statistics are a bore, and to be understood they must be translated into human beings. These figures mean that hundreds of thousands of voters, loyal to Republicans two or four years ago, switched their political brands.

And it means, too, that many Republican politicians of promise have been set back, some maybe for keeps. These range all the way from unknown legislators to Rep. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, to Charles H. Percy of Illinois, to Goldwater himself.

All right. So the blow was severe. What then?

Most talk has centered around the party chairman, Dean Burch, with speculation on what will happen when the national committee meets in January. Yet curiously all agree that the committee has no real power.

In conceding defeat, Goldwater said: "The leadership of the party, the rebuilding of the party, rests with the ticket that was picked at the national convention, win, lose or draw, and I would see my position here as working with the leadership of the Republican members of the House and the Senate, this historic place where the real political power rests."

If, when a party loses the White House, whatever power it has is in Congress, why care about the national committee?

The arguments run like this:

Goldwaterites — They worked hard to capture a party that had been run by its Eastern wing for a generation. It would be folly, they feel, to leave the field simply because one battle had been lost. Far from being resigned to their fate, they have been on the attack. In cutting the headquarters staff, the first to go were those of doubtful fealty to Goldwater before San Francisco.

Anti-Goldwaterites — Conservatives have had their big chance — and muffed it. True, the national machinery has no power, but to keep it intact is a constant reminder of the party's humiliation and a steady drag on attempts to restore its health. Unless Republicans move back closer to the political center, they argue, the future is bleak everywhere but in the South.

Much of the criticism is aimed at two young men who were almost unknown a few months ago, Dean Burch, the national chairman, and John E. Grenier of Alabama, executive director of the GOP.

Burch, 36, a lean six-footer, is a onetime administrative assistant, and a longtime admirer, of Goldwater. He was practicing law in Tucson, Ariz., when Goldwater tapped him for the $30,000-a-year job as national chairman.

Grenier, 33, has moved up in Republican ranks along what would seem to be the most difficult of all paths, by way of Birmingham, Aa. In one sense, he was incredibly successful. Goldwater scored in the South as no Republican ever dreamed of doing.

A couple of critics speak:

Sen. Hugh Scott, who led Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton's unsuccessful fight for the presidential nomination, called on GOP congressmen and governors to work together.

"We can then make our decision," Scott said, "as to what is to be done with regard to the national chairmanship and the removal of such men as John Grenier."

Gov. Smylie's view: "I have nothing against Burch. He's a personable guy. But right or wrong, the whole machinery of the party is now considered anti-civil rights and anti-Social Security."

So it looks as if the scrap will be bitter.

But it's well to remember that politics is the art of compromise. A serious rupture is threatened only if one or both sides should decide it would rather stick by its principles and lose than to move to middle ground and win.

In all the in-fighting, what will become of Goldwater? As he pointed out in 1960, even ex-presidents can't keep control of a party.

It would be interesting to know if Goldwater's researches included the second president, crusty, self-righteous old John Adams, who knew first hand the perils of defeat.

"Once the erosion of power begins it develops a momentum of its own," Adams glumly observed. "Voters generally show a disposition to abandon a sinking politician."

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent C. Wolf, Merriam, Kan., formerly of Tipton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Monica Rose, to A1C Jesus C. George, son of Mr. Jose M. George, Agana, Guam, and the late Mrs. George. The wedding is to be held April 24, 1965, at St. Mary's Church, Newburgh, N.Y.

MISSOURI'S CHAMPION CORN GROWER

Missouri's champion corn grower is Vern Bergman of Harrisonville. To win the statewide corn growing contest sponsored by the Missouri Farmers Association, Bergman averaged 289.58 bushels an acre. He planted his corn in 18 inch rows and spent $115 an acre on fertilizer. The varieties are 2180 and 3232. It was planted on May 15 and he had 32,720 stalks to the acre. He flooded the field with water pumped from a nearby drainage ditch on July 15 while corn was tasseling and on August 1 during early fill. Bergman is sold on minimum cultivation and applied 6 pounds of aldrin per acre as a soil insecticide. The 12-acre contest field was under water 4 times in the spring and suffered from 105 degree temperature for a week late in July. Bergman thinks that he can grow 350 bushels an acre when he gets a decent growing season. Last year he averaged 217.58 bushels an acre.

New Liturgy Into Effect For Catholics

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — American Roman Catholics begin worshiping in a new and livelier way Sunday, using their own language to a large extent instead of the traditional Latin required since ancient times.

The historic shift also calls for a vastly increased role by the lay congregation — in prayers, litanies and song.

It will "make the Church more comprehensible to all men," declares a liturgical commission of United States bishops, and lead to a more "full, conscious and active participation" by the faithful.

The bishops set this Sunday, the first of Advent and the beginning of the new ecclesiastical year, for introduction of the far-reaching changes in parishes across the nation.

A tremendous and telling impact was foreseen among the nearly 45 million Catholics in this country's 17,500 parish churches in cities and villages.

Many have been going through special instructions and practice to prepare for the new mode of worship. For others, it may seem at first stunningly unfamiliar, different — and perhaps temporarily disconcerting.

Some Catholics, settled in the habits of a lifetime, have voiced complaints about the extensive changes. Smoothing out the readjustments is expected to be a long process.

The reforms originally were authorized by the Vatican council in Rome last year in its monumental 12,000-word "Constitution on the Liturgy," which left detailed implementation up to regional hierarchies.

The "Magna Carta of Christian renewal," the Rev. Godfrey Diekman, an American Benedictine expert on Church worship, has called the document.

Specific modifications worked out for initiation in this country Sunday put about half the Mass in English, with most of it to be voiced by the people instead of only by priest or altar assistants.

"The Lord be with you," says the priest, rather than the usual "Dominus vobiscum."

"And with Thy spirit," the congregation choruses back, instead of an altar boy murmuring "Et cum spiritu Tuo."

"Let us pray."

And many of the prayers, psalms, creeds and chants of praise are to be in unison, aloud and in the common tongue, priest and people together, rather than being confined to a Latin monotone at the altar, remote from those in the pews.

Greater lay participation is a "primary aim," says the Rev. Frederick R. McManus, a liturgical scholar of Catholic University, and an expert adviser to the Vatican Council.

He adds the changes come to grips with "what has been called the 'Sunday morning crisis', congregations that are uninvolved or indifferent, rites that are routine or unintelligible", and will make them more meaningful and understandable.

Also, more stress is to be put on the Scriptures and pulpit preaching.

The move has striking ecumenical overtones.

"When we invite a Protestant friend, he will find himself very much at home in the 'fore-mass' or 'Service of the World'," says the Most Rev. Paul J. Hallinan, archbishop of Atlanta and a liturgical commission member.

There will be considerably more similarity between Catholic and Protestant worship, particularly with the more liturgically-minded denominations, such as Episcopalians and Lutherans.

So much so, observed a Lutheran Church in America editor, the Rev. Dr. Elson Ruff, that "we immediately wonder who borrowed what from whom.

"It seems that Luther was the borrower in the first place, and the Lutheran liturgy is actually a revised version of the Roman Mass."

Worship of Protestants has always been in the people's language, a point at issue in their 16th Century break from Rome.

The Catholic Mass, often called the Church's "great prayer" and centering on the Eucharist or Lord's Supper, first was put in Latin when that was the language spoken by most Christians of the Fourth Century Roman Empire.

Although Latin became a dead language, it was retained by the Western Rite of the Church, leaving the Mass in a tongue uniform but unknown by most worshippers, and thus largely up to the clergy.

"With the introduction of the vernacular, the people can participate intelligently instead of murmuring a mumbo-jumbo of Latin, as incomprehensible to them as Hindustani," says the Rev. Ralph Gorman, editor of the Catholic magazine, The Sign.

Under the revamped ritual, worshipers will stand in many phases of it, for prayers, hymns and psalms, instead of kneeling silently through most of the Mass as before.

The priest may face the people throughout the service, instead of having his back to them as in the past, although this remains optional since it requires a forward position for the altar table to permit standing behind it.

Most altars are against the wall, but many churches are making or planning shifts in furnishings to facilitate the new arrangement, aimed at bringing priest and people closer together in shared, communal worship.

While the canon, or central part of the Mass for consecration of the bread and wine, will remain in Latin, most of the rest is to be in English.

This includes all Scripture readings, the Epistle read by a lay lector or the priest, and the Gospel by the priest and or a deacon.

It also includes the varying weekly propers, such as the chanted introit or entrance psalms, special prayers, the gradual chanted between the first and second Scripture lessons, and offeratory and communion verses.

Also in English are the ordinary parts of the Mass to be recited by people and priest together or alternately in response to each other, including:

The Kyrie, "Lord, have mercy . . ."; the Gloria, "Glory to God in the highest . . ."; the Creed, "I believe in one God, the Father Almight . . ."; the Sanctus before the consecration, "Holy, holy, holy Lord God of hosts . . ."; the Lord's Prayer, "Our Father, Who art in Heaven . . ."; the Agnus Dei, "Lamb of God, Who take away the sins of the world. . ."

When the people receive communion, either standing or kneeling according to custom, the priest says, "the body of Christ," and the recipient says, "Amen."

The dismissal, too, is in English, "Go, the Mass is ended," and the blessing, "May Almight God bless you, the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit."

"Amen," the people respond.

Singing of hymns — a relatively rare thing in most Catholic parishes — alsi is recommended, as an opening processional, at the offeratory, at communion and a recessional hymn.

Sermons, sometimes a perfunctory affair in the past, are mandatory at Masses on Sundays and on high holy days.

The changes will "require a thorough re-education of both priests and people," says the Rev. Gerard S. Sloyan, president of the North American Liturgical Conference.

It involves such a major shift in past practice that "it is human nature for some not to take it too easily at first," comments the Msgr. John Fleming, of Manhattan's Church of Our Savior. "But in time, it will mean a lot more than ever before."

To those Catholics accustomed to spending Mass mostly in private meditation, despite urgings to the contrary, the transition poses the biggest reorientation.

Many are "very much against it," says the Rev. Charles Hayfner, of St. Ignatius Loyola church here. "They're used to their own little private prayers. But they'll come around. Others are very enthusiastic."

Archbishop Hallinan comments:

"For some, especially those fixed in their ways, the changes may be distasteful. Those who like the new ways must understand how hard it is for some people to change the habits of a lifetime.

"Those who like the old ways must try to understand how invigorating life in the Catholic Church is becoming; they must excuse the enthusiasm of the others and not look upon them as dangerous extremists."

DISCOVERING A TRAGEDY—Two British airmen stationed at the Eastleigh RAF Base near Nairobi, Kenya, conquered the 16,890-foot Mawenzi Peak, twin of Mount Kilimanjaro, and found the wreckage of a 1955 plane crash. The climbers found this wing and tail section and part of the undercarriage of the East African Airways DC-3 at the 15,000-foot level. All on board were killed in the 1955 tragedy. Rescue attempts were abandoned years ago.

HAVE YOU SEEN THIS SIGN?

It is located one and one-fourth miles west of Sedalia on Highway 50.

The program of Equal Pay for Equal Work is to raise the economy of all small communities in the area that is covered by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. The wage differencial between the rural and the urban workers of Southwestern Bell is great enough to be of very significant value to business men operating in these areas.

Southwestern Bell designates small towns by a numbered classification. Sedalia, Mo. is rated a 4th class pay town by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. A class four town is next to the lowest class town on record which is class five. What does this mean to the town of Sedalia, its business people? It means a payroll loss of $89,584.00 per year. Less money being spent in the Sedalia area; money that derived from the area, but is unjustly deprived from the community. Kansas City and all surrounding towns are class one, St. Louis being the one and only class one A, but this includes all of St. Louis County except one town which is Pacific.

We, the workers for Southwestern Bell believe we are entitled to as much money for doing the same work in quality and quantity as anyone in these other areas, but we need the support of our merchants to accomplish this. The following figures will show why you should help——

A man in St. Louis makes $21.50 more per week than one in Sedalia. Sedalia employees 18 men. Multiplied by 5 weeks equals $20,124.00
Operators in St. Louis $12.50 more per week than one in Sedalia. Sedalia employees 80 women. Multiplied by 52 weeks equals 52,000.00
Commercial Dept. in St. Louis $16.50 more per week than one in Sedalia. Sedalia employees 10 women. Multiplied by 52 weeks equals 8,580.00
Construction Dept. in St. Louis $19.00 more per week than one in Sedalia. Sedalia employees 10 men. Multiplied by 52 weeks equals 8,880.00
In this report we have not listed House Service or any of the clerks that work in Sedalia.

TOTAL YEARLY $89,584.00

The total difference in pay between St. Louis County and the money we believe we are entitled to amounts to something worth fighing for, and we aim to do it.

Sedalia is a long distance toll center, an industry within itself. Thousand upon thousands of toll calls are processed through here daily. Sedalia is a vital link in the communication system of Bell Telephone—yet she is rated 4th class.

Long distant charges are the same throughout the nation. Local telephone rates are set by the number of phones you can call toll free and the total investment in the state. The phone rates are cheaper in Sedalia than St. Louis because of the small number of phones you can call toll free compared to St. Louis. The phone rates are not cheaper in Sedalia because the employees receive $21.50 per week less for equal work performed.

Ten years ago the difference in pay for employees performing equal work between St. Louis and Sedalia was $7.00 per week—today it is $21.50. This difference in pay is not based on the different cost of living. According to a U.S. Agriculture Dept. survey the cost of living in the rural area has now caught up with the urban area. House Bill 103 introduced at the last session of the State Legislature, show this to be true.

The Rev. Ken Paluczak, Director of the Labor Institute of St. Louis, refers to this unjust difference in pay as "discrimitory" by Southwestern Bell against their employees in smaller towns. The President of Communication Workers of America, oe Beirne, highly respected among business leaders as well as labor leaders, refers to this discrimination as Bell Telephone acting like a one pump gas station in administering its wage policy. As you may know, Bell Telephone is the largest corporation in the world.

We believe a telephone man or woman should be paid by what they contribute through their labor to the business, and economical wealth of the business—not to be determined by what Southwestern Bell calls a 4th class pay town.

The Shift to Politics In Pakistan

By DAN COGGIN

CHITTAGONG, East Pakistan (AP) — The Freedom Special, with hundreds of people sitting atop it and screaming thousands running alongside, rolled slowly into view. In the mass hysteria someone pulled the emergency cord and the train jammed to a halt.

Miss Fatima Jinnah, a frail, silver-haired woman of 71, walked wearily to the door of her coach to tell her excited "children" why they should replace the six-year-old regime of Khan. In his place, she argued they should elect her.

Scenes like this occurred frequently in recent months amid the rice paddies and coconut groves outside this seaport on the Bay of Bengal. It was a strange presidential campaign for this part of the world, but typical of the way things are happening in Pakistan these days.

For Pakistan is in a state of flux — politically, economically and socially.

The outcome of the first full-scale national election in 17 years is of more than passing interest in Western capitals, especially Washington, because Pakistan is the world's most-populous Moslem nation and occupies a strategic position — two factors weighing heavily in the East-West power struggle.

Half of this divided nation of 100 million people lies astride the eastern approaches to the vast Indian subcontinent. The other stands between Communist China and the oil-rich Middle East.

The United States has put more than $4 billion into military and economic aid to ease Pakistan through its transition period and secure it for the Western camp. Neither U.S. goal is assured in this tumultuous period.

The unusual is becoming ordinary as Pakistan gropes for a future political path in the increasingly bitter contest between the field marshal and the lady.

Next March one of them will be elected president for the next five years. The nation has already voted, during October and early November, but not directly for president. The voters chose 80,000 "basic democrats," or electors, who next March will form an electoral college and actually name the president.

Most bets are on Ayub to retain power. But even if he does, things will continue to change in Pakistan.

This longtime U.S. ally is shifting to a more neutral stance in world affairs, snuggling up to neighboring Communist China and chafing in its membership in the U.S.-backed CENTO and SEATO military alliances.

Pakistan at the same time is searching for solutions to the problems of poverty, hunger and disease, which have plagued this land for centuries. If there has been no dramatic over-all improvement, there has been solid progress, and reason for hope.

Miss Jinnah, revered sister of Pakistan's founding father, Mohammed Ali Jinnah, the late "Great Leader", is herself an unthinkable phenomenon in this Moslem land. Until recently women have been seldom seen and never heard.

"Madar-e-Miliat Zindabad!" — Long live the nation's mother — rang in Miss Jinnah's ears throughout her whistlestop tour of East Pakistan. At least a million people turned out to cheer her on.

Even in West Pakistan, Ayub's traditional stronghold 1,100 miles away across India, a sea of adoring faces screamed their approval of her emergence from the life of seclusion she had led since her brother's death in 1948.

Miss Jinnah was a national figure back in those days, campaigning with and for her brother. It was his fight that won a separate Pakistan for Moslems when Britain granted independence to the predominantly Hindu Indian subcontinent in 1947.

But for years Pakistan has been the private political preserve of Field Marshal Ayub, and Miss Jinnah's threat to his power seems to be surprising him as much as anyone.

Miss Jinnah is the joint candidate of five opposition parties whose agreement on her was their first in years. She has great mass appeal.

Much popular feeling also remains for Ayub, 61, a tall, ruggedly built man with the soldierly bearing and clipped tones of his British military school.

Field Marshal Ayub took power in a bloodless coup in 1958, abolished parliamentary government and tossed out the last of a series of regimes that had kept the country in political turmoil almost since independence.

Tough and effective, the former army chief ruled Pakistan under martial law until 1962, weeded out corrupt officials and, making use of U.S. and other foreign aid, set Pakistan on the road to what experts called respectable economic growth.

During military rule there was an enforced silence on the political front. Many civil rights were suspended, yet many Pakistanis saw in the new orderliness a budding national well-being. These Pakistanis felt Ayub's takeover was good for the country.

In 1962, Ayub ended martial law and gave Pakistan what he said was as much democracy as he thought it was ready for. He promulgated a constitution providing sweeping presidential powers, joined a political party and unmuzzled the opposition.

Since then doubt and disappointment have arisen amid talk of new corruption, Ayub's press controls and his jailing of many political opponents. There also have been charges of army brutality and that a concentration camp exists in the rebellious Baluchistan region of West Pakistan.

Such talk figured in the national mood as Pakistan voted for presidential electors. People close to Ayub say he had expected an easy campaign but then found Miss Jinnah a bit hard to cope with.

Perhaps reflecting his uneasiness, his statements stiffened as the campaign progressed.

He began gently with remarks that boiled down to: Miss Jinnah is a nice little lady but has no business being president. Later, he said: "She is an old recluse and weak-minded. If you vote for her you will be inviting chaos."

Miss Jinnah hit back, accused Ayub of being a dictator, harped on corruption and decried Pakistan's poverty — average per capita earnings: $73 a year, among the lowest in the world.

If Miss Jinnah wins in the March balloting — she says she thinks it's doubtful because Ayub's government will have four months to influence the electors — she will restore parliamentary government, take a ceremonial role as president and let a prime minister wield power.

Ayub says a return to the parliamentary system would be a disaster, unleashing the quarreling, splintered political parties and renewing the instability that plagued the succession of governments before his takeover.

Many observers, looking over the far left to far right range of Miss Jinnah's support, tend to agree.

No matter who wins, the victor will be confronted with a changing Pakistan. The people have had a taste of politics. In the years ahead they may demand more than a taste.

In Self-Examination

Canadian People Divided, Disturbed Over the Future

EDITOR'S NOTE — What is Canada? That is a question troubling the northern neighbor of the United States. In the search for an answer, Canadians are going through new soul-searching. The following first of five stories sets out the various crises which Canada is experiencing.

By MAX HARRELSON

OTTAWA (AP) — When you you find a country engrossed in self-examination, its 19 million people are divided and disturbed over the future.

You find bitterness, name-calling, threats and sometimes violence. There are debates, seminars, editorials, floods of letters to newspapers and private discussions everywhere.

What is Canada? they ask. What does French-Canada want? Should Canada revise its constitution to give the provinces more authority? Should the traditional ties with the British crown be loosened, or broken?

Some of these problems are new. Others have worried Canadians, irritated them, and perplexed them over the years.

One, obviously, is Canada's proximity to the United States — a giant ten times as big in population, closely tied to Canada as an ally, deeply involved in the ownership of the country's industry and exporting U.S. culture in massive quantities to compete with Canada's own brand.

Canadians have a fierce national pride and they are trying hard to create a distinctive national image. Many have genuine fears that both their independence and their national personality may be snuffed out by what is intended as a friendly hug.

There are others who look across the border with envy at the higher wages paid by U.S. industry and at the lower cost of luxury items, such as automobiles, refrigerators and television sets.

A major complaint heard these days is that the Americans don't understand Canada and that they take Canada for granted.

Generally, however, Canadian-American relations have never been better. There has been a substantial improvement in the climate since the bitter anti-American attacks launched by former Prime Minister John G. Diefenbaker in the 1962 political campaign.

Within Canada there are grave political divisions, caused by the bicultural nature of the country. As one analyst said, French - Canada has finally emerged into the 20th century and is demanding a new and enlarged role in government.

The separatist movement in Quebec, while not extensive, has resulted in an English backlash in some parts of Canada. This has been reflected to some extent in the parliamentary battle over a proposed new maple leaf flag to replace the red ensign of the British Merchant Marine, now used as Canada's flag.

But the flag issue and the question of Canada's relationship to the British crown are not simply disagreements between British and French Canadians.

A writer, Frank Kelley, living in Edmonton, Alberta, wrote recently in Maclean's magazine:

"I think it's time someone asked the Anglophiles what it is, exactly, that Canada owes England and what, exactly, England did for us that should justify our allegiance to her flag."

A Quebec member of Parliament, Auguste Choquette, predicted that Canada will become a republic within 15 or 20 years.

This hardly seems likely, but there does appear to be a good chance that there will be a shift of power from the federal government in Ottawa to the 10 provincial governments.

One of the complicating factors in the political scene is the fact that the federal government is trying to resolve the country's constitutional crisis without a clearcut majority in Parliament.

This is one of the reasons Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson is likely to call for a new national election next spring — after only two years in office. He and his advisers feel that conditions are right for a big Liberal victory, despite the dangers of holding an election while emotions are so inflamed.

For one thing, Canada is in the midst of a tremendous economic boom. New buildings are going up everywhere, new industries are opening, retail buying is setting records and unemployment is at the lowest level since 1956.

Douglas Fisher of the New Democrat party sees the next five to 10 years as a make-or-break period for Canada.

He said the country has reached the stage where it must have a showdown, regardless of how divisive it might be.

"It might be good to get questions out in the open," he said. "It's time we had a real torture period. It's inevitable."

Barry Williams Explains JuCo For Altrusans

Barry Williams, a member of the Jaycees, explained the proposed junior college to Altrusa Club Nov. 23 at the home of Mrs. Roy L. Brown, chairman of the vocational services committee, and was welcomed by Mrs. Mabel Chambers, president.

Williams, who is chairman of the Jaycee effort for the community college, said more students might be able to afford a college education if they could stay at home avoiding room and board, a major item in college expenses. Such a college, if established in Sedalia, said the speaker, would accommodate several towns and counties and be a valuable asset to Sedalia. A question and answer period was held after Williams' address. The group expressed its support of the project.

Altrusa is continuing support of "Meals for Millions" and educational grants in aid to Latin American and Asian women for graduate study in North America. The latter project, supported by voluntary contributions from clubs and individual Altrusans, helps educate those women to enable them to contribute to their own countries and people.

Miss Opal O'Briant is program chairman for the noon luncheon meeting Dec. 7 at Bothwell Hotel.

Mrs. Bob Lindstrom, leader, showed the girls how to make turkey centerpieces for the Thanksgiving table. She took an apple and stuck a toothpick covered with raisins in the apple for the neck and put a stuffed olive on the end of the toothpick to represent the turkey's head and a red pimiento for the turkey's wattle. Five toothpicks covered with raisins at the opposite end of the apple were the turkey's tail feathers and three toothpicks were the legs and balance.

After turkeys were finished, a horseshoe was formed by the girls around the flags for the Pledge of Allegiance and Brownie Promise. Color bearers were Kay England, Kathy Rusche, Susie Pledge and Susan Kenney.

Lend a Hand To Rebuild Monk's Home

OXFORD, Mich. (AP) — America's only Lutheran monk has rebuilt his unique outpost of the ecumenical movement.

The Rev. Arthur Kreinheder, founder and sole member of an unusual monastic order, said construction crews completed the building of St. Augustine's House Friday. It replaces a retreat house destroyed by fire in the summer of 1963.

Roman Catholics, Lutherans and other Christians pitched in "as a labor of love" to make the rebuilding possible, Rev. Kreinheder, 59, said.

The $35,000 building requires only interior decoration and furnishings to be complete for use in retreats by Lutherans and non-Lutherans who seek brief respites through religious exercises from their bustling normal lives.

"There is only one church of Jesus Christ. We all know this. But we live as if we didn't know it. That's the important thing about his new house. It is a place of meeting for Christians where they can learn to know each other, understand each other and love each other," Rev. Kreinheder said.

The Rev. Kreinheder, sole member of the Congregation of the Servants of Christ which he founded in 1958, said he seeks reunion of Lutherans and Roman Catholics but knows it "needs a lot of patient labor." Martin Luther left the Catholic Church in the 16th century.

The Rev. Kreinheder draws many of his worker recruits from the Roman Catholic St. Benedict of Montefano Monastery which is "right across from our driveway."

He calls them "my Benedictine neighbors" and follows, in his monkhood, a pattern of rules formulated and practiced by the Benedictine Order.

His neighbors "help me a great deal," the Rev. Kreinheder said.

"I told their Father John 'there's so much mud around the house I've got to get some sod.'

"So he jumped in his truck with a couple of novices and came back with a great load of sod. And they put it in by moonlight.

"That's the kind of neighbors we have," the Rev. Kreinheder said.

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City will increase its bank discount rate to four per cent, effective Monday. The current rate is 3½ per cent.

The Kansas City bank serves the 10th District, which includes all of Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming; almost all of Oklahoma; northern New Mexico, and the western tier of counties in Missouri.

Charles Powers Wins Two $300 Writing Awards

Charles Powers, Great Bend, Kan., formerly of Sedalia, has won $300 for placing second in the October William Randolph Hearst general news competition for collegiate journalists. He is a student at Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kan.

Powers competed with students from 49 accredited schools or journalism departments. He also won $300 for the K-State department of technical journalism. Previously he won honorable mention for an editorial.

The winning entry of Powers' was a story written last summer while he was interning at The Kansas City Star, which published the story in the Star, Sept. 1. OH, FOR THE LIFE OF AN ACTOR—When Dick Kleiner, NEA's Hollywood correspondent, was invited to take an actor's role in "The Glory Guys," little did he dream that a whole new career was opening for him. A U. S. cavalryman's outfit, moustache and an almost impossible make-up job transformed Dick from an anemic typewriter pounder into a rakish, almost-but-not-quite Richard Boone type. Our hero gains a moustache, left. The relaxed chap holding up the tree in center photo is Dick, posing with an extra, Trinidad Villa, son of Mexico's famous Pancho, and, right, Dick relaxes with Harve Presnell, one of the film's stars. Oscar for a supporting role? Well, Dick did "support" a coat for a general 37 times.

Smith-Cotton Honor Society To Initiate

By Lonita Martin

Smith-Cotton Chapter, National Honor Society, an organization of junior and senior students maintaining S (superior) grade averages, will present its annual initiation program Dec. 2 for senior high students of the Smith-Cotton High School. New members will be announced and the initiation ceremony undertaken. Arthur Hoffman, president, will preside, assisted by the secretary, Lonita Martin, and several members. Members who will explain the organization include: Mackie Silverman, character; Paula Walters, club emblem; Judy Christian, leadership; Jo Dickey, scholarship, and Becky Cramer, service.

Leadership, scholarship, service and character are ideals of the organization, sponsored by Mrs. Irma Keyes.

L-Club Initiates Go Through Their Paces

Routine hubub in the halls of S-C preceding first hour classes was interrupted last Friday morning as L-Club initiates performed customary stunts required of them before acceptance into the organization. Clad as girls, complete with make-up and wearing skirts composed of weird-looking neckties, the hardy souls wishing to join the Lettermen's Club quacked, sang, cheered, carried, pushed and proposed. They quacked their way down the hall while doing the duck-walk; sang silly little songs; cheered their masters and all L-Club members. They carried books, weighted sacks and occasionally their masters. They pushed pennies with their noses; proposed marriage, — sometimes kissing the hands of blushing girls. The students found the situation hilarious and at the same time, sympathized with the plight of the initiates. Nevertheless, the once humiliated and humble initiates are now Mighty Tiger Lettermen Club members, counting pride in their accomplishments well worth one day of servitude.

College Night Held

Many S-C juniors and seniors recently learned about colleges they are tentatively planning to attend, when representatives of numerous Missouri colleges and universities conducted 30 minute sessions, for the purpose of providing prospective attendees with college information. H. N. Branson, guidance director at S-C, states that college night is one of the many sources of reliable information for college-bound students and recommends attendance of this annual session for all juniors and seniors iterested in college.

Other numbers on the program were: a piano solo, "In My Garden," by Rita Hamlin; the myth of Alacus and the Myrmidons, Judy Wallace; a flute trio, Jennifer Van Vickle, Anne Sillers and Marjorie Thomas, playing "Soata" by James Hook, A talk on the Cerealia, a Roman fall festival of Thanksgiving, Linda Flippin, and a vocal duet in Latin, "We Gather Together to Ask the Lord's Blessings," by Sandra Pahlow and Janice Rundlett, accompanied by Janet Reyburn.

Larry Arnett, president, presided over the brief business meeting preceding the program. The club is sponsored by John C. Allen, S-C Latin and English instructor.

The group decided to fill a Christmas basket for a family.

It was indicated Smith-Cotton would be represented in the Nov. 21 wool contest.

The group voted to help serve a dinner Dec. 8 for the board of education, Mrs. Mary Maddox, sponsor, reported.

Washington Capsules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration plans to ask for legislation making the possession of pep pills illegal. The pills are becoming a big money item in organized crime because of lack of federal control, says George P. Larrick, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration.

Arrests for possession of the pills can only be made now if the federal agents can prove the pills moved across state boundaries.

Larrick said bigtime racketeers are being attracted to the pep pill trade by the lure of large profits. The pills can be bought for $1 a thousand and peddled for 5 to 10 cents a pill, he said.

Larrick discussed the pep pill problem Thursday on a radio interview sponsored by the AFL-CIO.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A submarine that can fly is the Navy's newest dream. It has awarded a $36,000 contract for design studies to see if such a combination is feasible.

What the Navy would like to have — in the event of a war with the Soviet Union — is a smallish submarine that could fly to such large inland bodies of water as the Black Sea and Caspian Sea and then plop back into the water to prey on Soviet ships. It would be almost impossible to get a conventional submarine into such seas during a war.

Its development would be "both complex and laborious" says a Navy aircraft engineer, Eugene H. Handler, in an article dealing with the flying sub in the magazine "U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings." Handler called for a careful examination before such an idea is shelved.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department is concerned about the survival of 50 or more kinds of birds and mammals that may be facing extinction. It is asking conservation groups to help it prepare a list of the threatened species so special protective measures can be devised.

Some of the species listed Thursday by the department are the California condor, Atlantic salmon, Florida everglade kite, attwater's prairie chicken, black-footer ferret, American ivory-billed woodpecker and whooping crane.

Krupp Has Potential For Arms

ESSEN, Germany (AP) — When Alfried Krupp walked out of a U. S. war crimes prison 13 years ago he vowed he would never again make arms.

Recent additions to the Krupp empire have prompted questions whether he may be having second thoughts. Although Krupp officials say no, two of the new companies have at least the potential to supply weapons to West Germany's 400,000-man army.

One, Atlas-Werke A. G. of Bremen, joined the Krupp concern shortly after a subsidiary narrowly lost an order to produce tanks.

The other is the Ernst Heinkel Flugzeugbau — aircraft company — of Speyer. It became a subsidiary of VFW, or Vereinigte Flugtechnische Werke — united air-technical company — of Bremen. Krupp, with a 40 per cent interest, is VFW's biggest stockholder. Thirty per cent is held by United Aircraft of East Hartford, Conn.

Heinkel's founder, Ernst Heinkel, designed the bombers that blitzed England in World War II. Heinkel died in 1955.

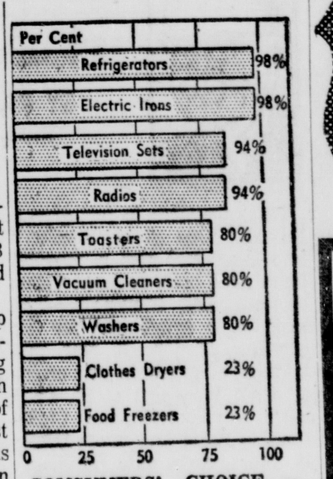
A Krupp statement said VFW's addition of Heinkel was a vital step toward cost-cutting by unifying research, development and production and thus toward strengthening German aviation's competitive position.

The West German government has encouraged such concentrations among aircraft makers.

The inclusion of Heinkel raises VFW's payroll to almost 9,000 workers in plants in seven cities. It has an order to produce military transports developed jointly by France and Germany.

Krupp, as the sole owner of his empire, is not obliged to bare his finances under German law. But Handelsblatt, a leading financial newspaper, suggests he should tell the public his plans regarding the potential weapon-makers under his control.

Sources close to Krupp said the "no arms" pledge stands unchanged. They noted that Atlas was bought by Krupp only after the tank order failed to materialize. The recent acquisitions, these sources say, are just part of further consolidation within the empire.



CONSUMERS' CHOICE — The average American home boasts a fairly complete array of time-saving appliances, according to a Labor Department survey. The survey shows that 98 of every 100 homes include a refrigerator and iron and 94 of every 100 have one or more radios and television sets. Lowest on the list? Clothes dryers and food freezers are in 23 per cent of all homes.

Recovery Of Stolen Items Solves Thefts

Location of numerous other items through "tips" has resulted in the clearing up of at least two more robberies in Sedalia and Pettis County. Sheriff Emmett Fairfax reported the locating of several cases of oil which were taken from a truck at the Skelly bulk plant, Main and Park several nights ago, and another case of oil reported taken from Jack Alfrey out of a shed on the old airport property near Dresden.

Wednesday, the sheriff and his deputies Jack Couts and Virgil Morris recovered articles taken from the Robert Parkhurst farm on the West 16th Street Road, and from the Pleasant Green store owned by Ewing Hert in Cooper County.

Fairfax said the robberies were contributed to by three youths who have been taken to Cooper County because of the Pleasant Green store robbery and a juvenile. He identified the three as James W. Hayes, Donald Connor, and Charles Ward as having been released Thursday to Sheriff Lylburn Mann of Boonville.

Candidates for Ulcers . . .

It's so effortless to find fault with the manner in which someone else conducts his personal or business affairs, yes, even to criticize another's individual mannerisms, dress, speech, or the way he holds his knife or fork.

A person who only sees eccentricities in another, has more than enough idiosyncrasies himself. But usually he is oblivious to them, and is insulted if his attention is called to them occasionally.

Chronic complainers in most instances may be suspected of having some affinity to the disease commonly referred to in recent time as alcoholism. Like the person who takes one snort of whiskey and can't thereafter control his intake, the character who starts out his morning with a snide remark about a friend or total stranger, continues through the day with his peculiar contribution to creating a state of unhappiness among all his social or business associates.

How in the devil these people escape an assault of burning ulcers is one of the mysteries of medical science.

And there are so many potential victims. This we casually observed during a 2,000 mile motor trip through ten states where we came in contact with many persons—not personal contacts but merely listening to conversations in public places such as motels, restaurants, department stores and super markets, or on the streets. Call it eavesdropping, if you please, but it was astounding to hear so much petty, catty and vigorous grumbling.

Hence there was much delight in once more absorbing ourselves in the congenial atmosphere of Sedalia and Pettis county where everyone has nice things to say about each other; where without rancor, without jealousy everyone contributes to the mental placidity of his neighbor! Well, most of the time.

Sure enough it's exhilirating to be back home.

That's the current mood although it can change to accommodate any windy recalcitrants who become too quibblingly fault-finding and who may disturb our peace of mind at home like we have had it disturbed abroad.

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Mrs. Gordon Potter, superintendent of Bothwell Hospital, entertained at her home, 1207 West Fifth street, complimentary to Mrs. Raymond Taylor, the former Nadine Pratt, who is leaving to join her husband in Washington, D.C., to reside. Mrs. Taylor has for two years been switchboard operator at the hospital. Mrs. Potter's guests were: Miss Eva Stevens, Miss Helen Turner, Miss Anna Marie Wright, Miss Mildred Hittenhaus, Miss Aletha Adams, Mrs. Herbert Emo, Mrs. Hudson Pursley, Mrs. Esther Dancer, Mrs. Mildred Ripley, Mrs. John Craig and Mrs. Taylor.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Buy Christmas Seals

Sheets of tuberculosis Christmas seals have arrived in the mail.

We must face the fact that tuberculosis is increasing in this country. We thought the little Christmas seal had done its work when sanatoria were closed and the disease seemed under control with new drugs and traveling clinics. The tremendous educational campaign conducted for years by the National Tuberculosis Association, its state and local organizations supported by the sale of Christmas seals, helped to cut the death rate from that insidious affliction.

But now, new forms of tuberculosis are appearing which the new drugs do not seem to reach. More people living in crowded areas under unsanitary conditions as well as poor and undernourished families in rural sections are succumbing to tuberculosis.

The fight must go on. Christmas seals help provide periodic examinations which detect early diagnosis for treatment and cure.

Dialogue from Washington

By VERA CLAY

Who needs an unemployed Republican Congressman?

It is a good question.

Up on Capitol Hill those defeated legislators and their staffs are forlornly moping about the marble halls. Where to go? What to do?

What about all those dead files? Should they be carted back home, burned or retained as keepsakes of these glamorous days in the nation's capital.

This is no joke. Many, many jobs are at stake besides the Congressman or Senator, himself. His entire office staff wakes up and finds itself a statistic, one of the jobless in the U.S.A.

The Republican Congressional Committee, always one to look out for its own, customarily and unofficially, as does the Democratic Congressional Committee, runs a central employment office for displaced Congressmen, administrative aides, secretaries, file clerks, economists, etc. Today the Republican rolls are swollen with names. The new Republican Congressmen moving in, few as they are, customarily bring their own folks with them, the tried and true secretary from back home who worked during the campaign now wins the plum spot in Washington. Even if some of the new legislators do hire from the experienced help on hand, the ratio of openings is proportionately smaller.

The sad fact is that very few who get caught up in the glamour of a job on Capitol Hill want to go home to Pocatello or East Lynn. The fast pace of Washington gets under their skin and a job at home seems tame.

The victors, however, always get the spoils and LBJ, our President, is a past master at paying off to those who did his bidding during the campaign. The job handouts have begun.

If past experience is any criteria, many of the Republican Congressmen will stay in Washington in one capacity or another: one of the favorite jobs is to establish a retainer arrangement with some corporation. The polite term is Washington representative; the actuality is lobbyist. Some prefer to practice law in Washington and others, until they get their bearings, haunt the eateries and the cloakrooms.

There is nothing so dead in Washington as a defeated candidate. Nowhere in the world does the lustre of success disappear so rapidly. Why, even the headwaiter forgets the name overnight, while the parking space soon vanishes and the gilt-edged invitations stop coming. In Washington, a fellow is only as good as the vote count today.

FINDING THE WAY

Thanks for Everything

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It's impossible to just give a "thank." One gives "thanks!" You can't just give a "thank" for a good book or great music or rewarding friendship. The singular is insufficient for the overflow of joy. It was this bursting of gratitude that erupted from the spirit of St. Paul when he told those early Christians to "sing and make music in your hearts unto the Lord, and in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ give thanks every day for everything to our God and Father."

There is no easy sentimentality about this. It isn't pretending that life is simple or that there is no need to struggle for justice or to work for righteousness. To thank God for everything is no Pollyanna sentiment. It is simply to see the wonder of life where we are. Keats described it:

Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He stared at the Pacific—and all his men
Look'd at each other with a wild surmise—
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

Giving thanks is having this "wild surmise," recognizing the possibilities in the human being as in the vast unexplored areas of space!

One of the toughest problems we'll solve in the immediate future is finding a personal sense of vocation in revolutionary times. The impact of automation, the population explosion, the knowledge explosion, and the rapidly changing situations in which most of our lives are cast make it difficult to understand the "everything" for which we give thanks.

If the man is a "nothing" he has hardly a "thank" to give to life. But if he senses the possibility of becoming the collaborator with God in the tackling of these tough realities, then there is a sense of being a hinge for destiny.

The giving of thanks is essential. It isn't a quantitative term; it's qualitative. It isn't counting them off; it's sharing a spirit. It's not a legalistic thing of being nice to the people who are nice to us; it is a spirit that creates the good, the true, and the beautiful. It isn't just the hospitality that returns a courtesy; it's even returning good for evil!

When you've known this understanding of life, you can't settle for just a "thank." At the growing age of life are those who by tackling the tough problems, by sharing in the exciting adventures and by dealing with the daily round indicate that they know how to give thanks every day for everything

Red Asian Policy: Kill Strong, Leave the Weak

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — My experiences with Red revolutionaries in Asia lead me to believe the killing of Americans and Belgians in the Congo is part of a pattern.

As they retreated in Korea, the Red Koreans and Chinese would line up the men and women leaders of each village and town they evacuated, force them to dig trenches, shoot and bury them in these open graves.

I have interviewed Korean witnesses to these incidents. I have seen pictures of the mass killings.

In several villages I know of, these killings averaged more than 100 adults each. In cities, the killings were greater.

This practice not only took out the leaders, it eliminated virtually the whole upper strata of village life — the skilled, the better educated, the managers, the better farmers, the teachers.

By thus destroying the local leadership, the Communists created chaos in their rear. This made it easier for the Red underground to move in.

With many of the educated, the strong and the courageous dead, the Communists counted on villagers electing weak or pliable heads the Red underground agents could deal with.

In South Viet Nam the Communist Viet Cong have followed the same pattern.

I was talking in Saigon a short time back with an able young Vietnamese whose brother was a hamlet chief in the far south.

"My brother," he said, "is no Communist. He hates the Communists. But he's very careful not to do anything they don't like or even do much of anything at all. They've told him that if he does nothing, if he idles along, he can live. If he tries to do something to help build up the hamlet and make life better, they'll get him."

I talked to an American who had spent the past several years in Vietnamese hamlets. "If a hamlet chief is too able or does too good a job," he said, "the Reds first warn him to slow down. If he doesn't, they kill him. Their idea is that if the people in the hamlets have good government, they won't want communism, but if the government is poor, they will."

"So the Communists over the past several years have killed thousands of able and eager administrators. This frightens other hamlet and village chiefs into not doing too much. It means the government of many hamlets is getting worse."

In the Congo, if this pattern means anything, Red Chinese agents are telling their retreating African Congo rebel proteges (before they leave each town or village) to kill, imprison or frighten away foreign and native peoples, white and black, who might be leaders or rallying points for democratic or religious thinking.

If they succeed in this, even though they lose the military battles and are forced underground, they will have so weakened the non-Communist opposition that the Reds will have an easier time building a strong Communist organization later in parts of the Congo.

Thus, even in losing, they would be setting the base for future Red victories.

DEAR POLLY— An empty lipstick case filled with cotton makes a nice needle and pin holder.— ALICE

DEAR POLLY— When moving to a new home, pack a suitcase or a carton with just enough sheets, pillowcases, towels and wash cloths to take care of the family's needs for the first night. Mark the container so it is easily found on arrival. This will save going through several large boxes to assemble the things needed.

When my daughter buys new slacks for her son, she immediately turns them inside out and irons on knee patches. This gives double protection and cuts down on mending. — G. S.

DEAR POLLY — I have a quick way to make a child's sweater from an adult's discarded one. Measure the child for length, waist and sleeve-length. Cut a paper pattern and lay it on the big sweater. Cut through the front and back at the same time. I lay the pattern for the smaller sweater on the lower part of the big sweater and the ribbing of one is the ribbing for the other. If there are no side seams to the adult sweater, the sleeves for the small one can be cut from what is left on the sides. Cut straight across the top from shoulder to shoulder of the new sweater and then cut the front neck lower. Sew shoulder seams together, then put the sleeves in the armholes and finally sew sleeves and body all together with small stitches on the sewing machine. Remove binding from the neck of the big sweater and apply to the neck of the newer and smaller one. Leggings can be made from the sleeves of a large sweater. Cut off the rounded tip at the top of the sleeves (the remainder of the shaped upper sleeve will be sewn together for a crotch seam) make a casing at the top for elastic to run through, and you have a pair of warm leggings for a youngster. — MRS. G. K.

GIRLS — If you are afraid runs might start in the sweater, mark the cutting lines with chalk and stitch before cutting. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Wearing bedroom slippers or shoes without any hose sometimes loosens the innersoles. Purchase a good quality, matching color washcloth and cut from it a pair of innersoles. Do not stitch. Glue each one on one side only and insert in your footwear. Wait 48 hours before wearing. The feet no longer adhere, the innersoles stay in and the terry cloth is very comfortable. — MISS M. M. K.

GIRLS — I cut up an old bath towel and it worked just fine. —POLLY

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Chairmen Are Law Unto Themselves

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—What President Johnson is up against in bucking all-powerful congressional committee chairmen is illustrated by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem and Rep. Mendel Rivers of Sumter, South Carolina.

Both are Democrats, but both stand for the exact opposite on almost every issue except one—namely, the right of a committee chairman to travel luxuriously abroad and have his way with congressional legislation.

Mr. Rivers represents the district where the south first fired on the stars and stripes, thereby precipitating the Civil War. Mr. Powell is a descendant of the slaves over whom that war was fought.

Powell has been touring Hawaii recently, with one of his secretaries, Miss Corrine Huff, the first Negro ever to win the "Miss Ohio" beauty contest title. She accompanied Powell on a more famous trip to the night spots of Europe in the summer of 1962, and again last summer when Powell actually forewent the vote on civil rights in order to take Miss Huff to Geneva.

A chairman of the education and labor committee, Powell has just wangled the most magnificent suite in the new Rayburn building which houses the office suites of congressmen.

It's a first floor layout with four rooms, including an inner sanctum for Powell, two bathrooms, indirect lighting, a kitchenette, and a balcony looking out at a view of the Washington monument and the botanical gardens park.

No South Carolina Bases Cut

Next door is an elegant array of offices for Powell's education and labor committee, also with a balcony and private bathroom for the chairman.

Ordinarily, the suite would be reserved for an elder congressional statesman, but Adam, who rates 47th in the House, has already been around to see about special drapes for the 12-foot-high windows.

Such are the powers and privileges of a committee chairman.

It should be noted, however, that neither President Johnson nor the late John F. Kennedy ever had any trouble getting Powell to report out legislation. He has an excellent record for legislative speed.

Powell's colleague, the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina, is just about to become chairman of the House armed services committee.

The Johnson administration apparently hasn't wanted to tangle with Rivers. At any rate, it didn't cut a single base, airport, or military facility from Rivers' home state—South Carolina.

For a long time the brass hats have practiced the policy of currying favor with powerful committee members. The Pentagon has been so obsequious to Congressman Rivers that almost any weekend he wants to fly down to Charleston, an Air Force plane is waiting for him at the MATS terminal in Washington, with another MATS plane waiting for him in Charleston Monday morning to take him back to Washington.

This is better service than any other known congressman gets, and it's all because Rivers has been No. 2 man on the House armed services committee. Now, with the retirement of Rep. Carl Vinson of Georgia, Rivers becomes chairman.

Rivers' junkets abroad have caused so much embarrassment that for some time House leaders put roadblocks in his path. His problem has been alcohol. When the courtly and usually charming congressman from South Carolina goes on a bender he really bends. There is no midway about it.

And some of his escapades abroad, especially one in the Savoy Hotel in London, caused red faces among the military escort officers entrusted with the job of chaperoning him.

However, seniority being what it is in Congress, Rivers now automatically steps up to be chairman of the House armed services committee.

Rebellion Against Seniority

This is one reason why the young Turks headed by Rep. Dick Bolling of Kansas City are leading a revolt against seniority, also why various others are working behind the scenes to change this antiquated system.

Bolling proposes to give the speaker sole power to appoint committee chairmen. This would give him considerable power in passing legislation, but kindly Speaker John McCormack of Boston, now 73, would be almost certain to lean toward congressional oldsters. Friendship, with John, is usually more important than policy.

Another proposal has been to rotate committee chairmanships every five or ten years. Still another has been to retire a chairman after the age of 70. None of these solutions is considered perfect.

The only sure fact is that a majority of a mere one vote is required in the Democratic caucuses of the House and Senate to change the entire antiquated system.

A little telephoning by the man in the White House who needs to get his program passed would easily get that one vote margin.

But the betting odds are that Lyndon, raised as a southern senator, will stick with his old cronies, the committee chairmen, no matter how much pain and anguish it will cause him later.

The Christmas Season

Up are the decorations
For the season has begun
Then starts the days of shopping
For gifts for everyone,
And soon we'll see old Santa
With his suit of brilliant red
With white fur trim to match his beard
And white curls on his head—
A season when we rush about
In sunshine and in snow
To do so much in a short time—
As if we didn't know
That every year at just this time
We go about like mad
So very good and thoughtful,
Santa don't like folks bad,
We buy a little wildly
Sometimes clear out of reason
Because no one is normal
At any Christmas season,
We get ourselves entangled
With ribbon by the yards
And gay Christmas paper
And loads of Christmas cards—
We bake fruit cakes and cookies,
Fill everything that's handy
Buy pounds and pounds of sugar
To make all kinds of candy,
And the pounds and pounds of candy
That we make in all this fuss
Eventually, we all find,
Adds pounds and pounds to us;
The Christmas trees are picked with care
And with care do we trim
This lovely symbol of new life
That shines so bright for Him—
The decorations now are up
We always feel a thrill
For lo, this merry season
Combine love and good will
It draws us somehow closer
With a feeling nice and warm
For there's no other time of year

Sartre and His Philosophy

By WILLIAM BARRETT
Written for
The Associated Press

Jean-Paul Sartre's refusal of the 1964 Nobel Prize for literature did not come as a violent surprise to those familiar with his philosophy. Sartre has often spoken of the individual as alone and unjustified, at once the possessor and victim of an unpredictable freedom.

Yet this radical individualist has also preached the need for social action, has more often than not been associated with the Communists in their political programs (while remaining an intellectual antagonist on philosophical issues), and he has even declared that the purpose of literature is to change the world so that the common lot of mankind in the future would be brighter.

A man of many parts — novelist, dramatist, and philosopher — he would seem thus to be a man of many paradoxes too. Yet no writer of our time has struggled more stubbornly to weave all these apparent paradoxes into one coherent philosophy.

That philosophy is called "existentialism," and Sartre has been celebrated as its "pope."

Sartre did not create this new style of thought but borrowed copiously from the work of previous German philosophers.

His two principal influences were the German philosophers Edmund Husserl and Martin Heidegger, major pioneers of a new philosophy. From Husserl, Sartre learned that the philosopher must cast aside empty abstractions and preconceived hypotheses in order to look at things as they really are. Sartre has carried this emphasis even into his novels, were he attacks the empty ideas and rigid formulae by which certain people distort or hide from the real meaning of their experience.

From Heidegger he learned that man stands alone before the prospect of his own death, and that human existence is one of care and anxiety whose best efforts always run the risk of coming to nothing.

Though a borrower, Sartre proceeded to transform what he had borrowed into a system that is original and bears the marks of his own personal temperament. Casting aside the assumptions of materialism and looking at man as he is, Sartre laid down as the first proposition of his philosophy that you cannot understand a human being as a mere object or thing. An object — a rock, for example — is solid, inert, self-contained. Man, on the contrary, is never self-contained, but always reaching out for new possibilities and paths. The thing stands before us all at once; but human existence is forever incomplete, aspiring beyond itself. Man is the restless animal.

For Sartre, this restlessness is inherent in the very fact of human consciousness itself. The mind is an instrument by means of which we think of things beyond the limits of our own skin, anticipate tomorrow or recall yesterday, or even reconstruct civilizations a thousand years in the past or dream of a world far in the future that will be very different from what we have today.

Here we have at once the glory of man, the quality that separates him from the brute, but also the secret sources of his anxiety. We can reach out toward possibilities that we have not yet achieved, but in doing so we are also aware that we do not measure up to them. We can anticipate a future that is not yet, but in so doing we can be aware of all the uncertainties and risks that may mar its coming.

We are free because we are conscious, but this freedom in turn can beget a deep anxiety.

Consequently, many people find freedom too painful and try to escape from it. A man, for example, may join a totalitarian party to which he can subordinate himself like a robot. Now, so he thinks he will not have to make painful choices for himself; he will simply be an instrument in the hands of those higher up. It is as if he wanted to escape being human by turning himself into a thing.

One of the most common ways of man turning himself into a robot, according to Sartre, is the excessive conformity of a person who tries to live exclusively in the eyes of others. The other person, after all, sees me only externally as an object; he does not experience the depth of my interior life with its freedom. If I live exclusively as he sees me, I become nothing but my own image and lose that interior life altogether.

In his most extended effort to describe his philosophy for a popular audience, Sartre called it "A New Humanism," and I think we can now see exactly what he meant by this label.

It is a humanism, first, because it places man at the center, and makes him the measure of all things. There is no higher Being who has assigned a meaning to our human existence; man has to do it himself. Sartre has been an unwavering and principled atheist since the age of 10. The idea of God is for him an impossibility, for we can never explain the existence of the world as a whole. This is the sense, much misunderstood, in which Sartre speaks of existence as absurd; perhaps he might have said, more accurately, that it remains ultimately a mystery.

But if Sartre is an uncompromising atheist, he is not a superficial one. To eliminate God is in one way an advantage to man since it leaves him subservient to nobody but himself and his own troubled capacity for freedom. On the other hand, the loss of God is a real one, since it leaves man alone and forlorn in a universe for which there is no reason — like an orphan abandoned on the cosmic doorstep.

In what sense is existentialism a "new" — as contrasted with old — humanism? Because, Sartre says, it starts from a newer and more radical vision of human existence. Older humanisms tended to assign to man a more or less definite human nature, with fixed capacities, drives, and values. Yet the fact is that human nature is no static thing. Man changes the conditions of his life, and in so doing can also change himself.

Sartre has compressed this point in a well-known slogan, "existence precedes essence," which sounds more puzzling than it really is. On the personal level, this slogan means simply that we are born first, and then make ourselves what we eventually become. Man does not fall from heaven like an angel, complete and fully formed. Existence is thrust upon the infant; we are born into definite social and historical conditions that are not of our choosing; yet within this framework forced upon him the individual still has the power to forge his own "essence" — make himself the kind of person he comes to be. On the historical or collective level, Sartre's slogan points out that the whole of humanity as it now exists has the power, if it so chooses, to change itself for better or worse. Today our scientific knowledge has developed even to the point where we can change human biology.

The final value of this philosophy will have to be judged by the future. Yet I think we can say even now that it is one of the more revealing expressions of our age. In accord with his own slogan, "existence precedes essence," Sartre was born into a world he never made, the 20th century with all its chaos and anxieties; and he has forged what meaning he could out of life in the very teeth of the gale.

The citation of the Nobel Committee spoke correctly of "the spirit of liberty" found in Sartre's writings. It might also have mentioned that Sartre has spoken for individualism and the individual at a time when societies everywhere are tending toward the organization man. His refusal of the prize was also a gesture against that tendency.

Financial Difficulties Seen In UN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Grave financial difficulties and a host of unresolved world issues confront diplomats from 112 nations at the U.N. General Assembly opening Tuesday. Some are already calling it the "crisis" session.

The threat of bankruptcy hangs over the world organization as diplomats brace themselves for long debate on whether to admit the Chinese Communists and expel the Chinese Nationalists, or to endorse self-determination for the restive eastern Mediterranean island republic of Cyprus, among other issues.

The growing influence of the African countries will be reflected in the election of an African as assembly president. The assembly will choose among three well-known U.N. diplomats: Omar Abdel Hamid Adeel of Sudan, Alex Quaison-Sackey of Ghana, and Nathan Barnes of Liberia. It will be the first time a black African diplomat has held the post, highly coveted for its prestige.

Three new nations will be admitted at the outset of the assembly — Malta, Malawi (former British Nyasaland) and Zambia (former Northern Rhodesia).

Secretary-General U Thant has warned that unless the financial problem is solved at the 19th assembly session, all of the United Nations' cash will vanish within the next six months.

Failure of the Soviet Union, France and several others to pay their assessments for U.N. peace keeping in the Congo, the Middle East or both is the root of the problem.

Both the Soviet Union and France contend the assessments are illegal because they were approved by the assembly instead of the Security Council. The United States takes an opposite view.

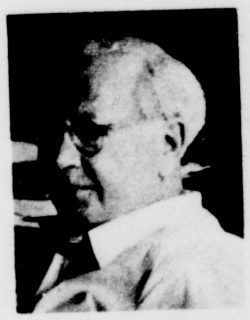
A Brave Answer from Britain

On the eve of Churchill's 90th birthday, a famous war correspondent recalls Hitler's peace offer of 1940— and England's astonishing reply



By WILLIAM L. SHIRER

Author of "Berlin Diary" and "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich"

IT HAPPENED to me in Berlin on the late evening of July 19, 1940, in the first year of World War II.

That war brought me, as it did millions of others, more than one inspiring moment. War, to be sure, brings out the worst in us—our primitive savagery above all. But it also inspires man's courage and bravery amid terrible adversity, and it kindles his resolve to endure and survive though life for the moment seems a veritable hell. To see men in battle and men and women sitting out the nightmare of the bombing of great cities aroused in one a certain admiration for the bumbling, suffering human race.

But the war also gave you periods of the blackest despair. On that July evening I happened to be in one of these periods, sunk in a dark mood of hopelessness. It seemed obvious that evil had triumphed in Europe. Scarcely three weeks before in the little clearing of the Forest of Compiègne I had watched Hitler dictate armistice terms to France which sealed the fall of that great, civilized country and condemned it to the tender mercies of the Nazi Germans.

By that time the Nazi dictator had conquered most of Europe. He already was at work establishing his so-called "New Order," under which the Germans would be the absolute masters, and the conquered peoples—the French, Belgians, Dutch, Norwegians, Danes, Poles, and Czechs—the sorry slaves.

Only Great Britain stood in Hitler's way. But she had no guns or tanks to defend her island. What few arms she had possessed had been left behind on the beaches at Dunkirk, when at the end of May the British Expeditionary Force had been driven by the Germans to the sea and forced to evacuate by ship across the English Channel.

HITLER HIMSELF was quite certain that the British would agree to peace, leaving him his conquests and enabling him to strike east and southeast against Russia and the Balkans. Why not? Why should Britain fight on alone against hopeless odds when it could get a peace that would leave it, unlike France and Poland and the other defeated lands, unscathed and free? On July 1, the Fuehrer had told the Italian ambassador in Berlin that he "could not conceive of anyone in England still seriously believing in victory."

As early as May 20, when the German army in France had broken through to the sea at Abbeville on the tenth day of the battle in the West, Hitler's thoughts had turned to peace with Britain. Gen. Alfred Jodl, Chief of Operations of the German High Command, had conferred with him that day and noted in his diary: "Fuehrer working on the peace treaty . . . Britain can get a separate peace any time after restitution of the colonies."

So confident was Hitler that the British had had enough of war that, even after the fall of France, he made no plans for continuing the war against them, and the army general staff did not bother to provide any. On June 21, at the very moment Hitler was entering the armistice car at Compiègne to humble the French, the army general staff informed the German naval high command that it was not "concerning itself with the question of England."

The Germans also were encouraged by the knowledge that powerful pressures on the British to make peace were building up in some of the neutral capitals and especially in Vatican City. On June 28 the Pope had sent confidential messages to Hitler, Mussolini, and Prime Minister Churchill offering his mediation for "a just and honorable peace."

The King of Sweden also was active in proposing peace to London and Berlin. In Washington the German chargé d'affaires, Hans Thomsen, was trying to see the British ambassador. He was also spending a good deal of money to convince Americans that Britain soon would be destroyed unless her leaders saw the light and made peace.

NOW PEACE is almost always preferable to war—but there are exceptions. And it seemed to me, after following the rise of the Nazi regime and witnessing its stunning military victories, that this was one of the exceptions. The British could get peace from Hitler that might save them momentarily—but at the ex-

CHRISTMAS MACAROONS

2 eggs • ¾ cup sugar • ⅓ cup unsifted all-purpose flour
¼ tsp. Calumet Baking Powder • ⅛ tsp. salt • 1 tbsp. butter, melted and cooled
1 tsp. vanilla • 2⅔ cups Baker's Angel Flake Coconut
½ of a 4-oz. pkg. Baker's German's Brand Sweet Chocolate, melted and cooled
¼ tsp. ground cinnamon • ¼ tsp. grated lemon rind

Beat eggs until foamy. Add sugar, beating constantly until thickened and light in color — takes 5 minutes on electric mixer. Fold in flour, baking powder and salt. Then add butter, vanilla and coconut. Divide batter in halves; blend chocolate and cinnamon into half and lemon rind into remainder. Drop from teaspoon onto greased and floured baking sheets. Decorate with Baker's Satin-Glazed Semi-Sweet Chocolate Chips, maraschino cherry halves, nuts, sugar sprinkles, or additional Baker's Angel Flake Coconut, if desired. Bake at 325° about 15 minutes, or until golden brown around edges. Let stand a few seconds; then place on racks to cool. Store in tightly covered container. Makes about 3 dozen.

More Macaroons. Prepare macaroons, omit chocolate and cinnamon, add ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind to undivided batter. Stir in 1 cup chopped candied fruit, Baker's Satin-Glazed Chocolate Chips or nuts.

Although spaghetti is all he can cook,

And called him a "one dish" chef?

Quips and Quotes

A police officer decided to investigate when he saw a man and woman pacing up and down in front of a darkened suburban home late one evening. "Say, what are you two doing?" the policeman demanded.

"We forgot our keys," the man explained, "and we're just waiting for the children to come home and let us in." —Giles Runyon

The only people who listen to both sides of an argument are the people who live next door. —G. H. Runner

Traffic became very heavy, and the woman driver was stuck right in the middle of a downtown tie-up. No matter what she tried, she couldn't get out of the mess. "What will I do now?" she asked her husband, who was sitting patiently beside her.

"I don't know," he replied, "but I bet if you climbed into the back seat you'd think of something." —James Shurluck

The precocious first grader was discussing a perplexing problem with his best buddy. "I've carried Mary Jane's books, bought her an ice-cream soda, and taken her to the movies. Now do you think I should kiss her?"

"Naw, you don't have to do that," his little friend replied. "You've done enough for that girl already!" —Herm Albright

And So to Bad

I find it hard to go to sleep,
And when at last I do
My nightmares make me scream and weep
They seem so very true.

Oh, I could go to sleep, no fear,
And sleep like one expiring,
But that would mean I couldn't hear
The news before retiring.

—Richard Armour

America's Little-Known Lunar Lab

U. S. astronauts are able to get a preview of "another world"—in Oregon's Moon Country

By HAL HIGDON

LESS THAN a month after America's Ranger 7 had broadcast the most detailed lunar pictures ever recorded, astronaut Walter Cunningham donned a bulky, white space suit and, with scientists monitoring his every step, strode across what perhaps is the earth's closest approximation of the face of the moon.

Cunningham's simulated moon journey late last August didn't occur behind guarded fences in Houston's new manned space center. Nor was it in some inaccessible wilderness.

He "walked on the moon" near the town of Bend, Ore., in the heart of what is known as the Moon Country. There, strange volcanic formations, grotesque lava beds, and ankle-deep volcanic ash are comparable to what scientists expect to find some day on the moon.

"No one can stand up and swear what the moon will be like," Cunningham admitted shortly after he and scientists from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) finished a week's tests in three different areas of the Moon Country of central Oregon. "The surfaces here just represent three possible surfaces we might encounter on the moon."

THE PRIMARY purpose of the Oregon tests, Cunningham said, was "to determine capabilities to perform on lunar-related terrain." Under security guard, NASA geologists laid out trails over the lava fields, then stood by with stopwatches to see how long Cunningham took to cover the distance. While his time didn't break any Olympic records, he performed well—especially for a man weighted down with an 80-pound air-conditioned moon suit.

Before Cunningham's trek across the lava fields, most lunar tests were made at the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston. There a special indoor "moon room" provided lighting conditions similar to those in space. NASA also built what it calls a "lunar surface simulation area." In an outdoor area approximately the size of a football field, it tried to duplicate the moon surface, using volcanic material and slag to simulate moon craters.

Astronaut Walter Cunningham trudges across barren Moon Country.

Other research was done at Langley Field in Virginia, where NASA erected a harness device that supports five-sixths of a person's weight. Strapped into the harness, potential moon explorers leaped, jumped, and walked sideways on walls, experiencing only one-sixth gravity—which is the gravity pull on the moon.

Despite laboratory attempts to copy the moon surface, the best moon-testing area may still prove to be the volcanic fields of central Oregon. For example, there is Crater Lake National Park, which was formed eons ago after a cataclysmic explosion splattered the area with a layer of coarse and sand-colored pumice dust. Many scientists expect the moon to be covered with a similar layer of dust, maybe so deep that a spaceship would sink into it. If so,. Oregon's pumice fields, which are often 15 to 20 feet deep, may show NASA exactly what to expect on the moon.

NASA also is conducting lunar surface tests in this area to explore an astronaut's ability to hike in a heavy space suit across the rough, spiny basaltic lava and sharp obsidian lava, or volcanic glass. The tests have been encouraging. Although Cunningham scrambled over loose lava and steep rock inclines with 31-degree pitches, he fell only once during his week of tests.

"More than likely we won't find conditions as rough on the moon," explained geologist Curt Mason. "If we did, the astronaut probably could avoid them."

ALTHOUGH NASA scientists decline to comment on future lunar surface tests, they probably will need to return to central Oregon. Future tests may explore these problems:

—Lava tubes, or caves, exist in the Oregon Moon Country. One is a full-mile long. If similar caves exist on the moon—and many scientists believe they do—they could provide shelter for future moon colonies.

—Water will be expensive to transport to the moon. Volcanic rock, at least here on earth, contains up to two percent water. Although it will not be easy, moon rock might be made to yield some liquid content.

—Apart from testing man's lunar mobility, future lava-field tests may involve vehicles capable of traversing the moon's surface, instruments capable of measuring it, and perhaps even a prototype lunar spaceship.

But before the first spaceship touches down on the moon's surface, perhaps in 1969 or 1970, much more information must be gathered. NASA scientists already have selected a general region for the first moon landing. They now are making more detailed studies of specific areas within that region.

In 1966 space scientists expect to land a vehicle on the moon that will transmit signals after arrival. A television camera peering in all directions may then tell scientists whether the surface of the moon resembles central Oregon's Moon Country—or, instead, is unlike anything on earth.

THE SCHOOL FOR RED ★ SPIES

IN A HOUSE outside Moscow, a privileged few may see a middle-aged Russian reading the adventures of Dennis the Menace or Buzz Sawyer. In a library full of American books and magazines, others, in American accents, are debating the merits of the Green Bay Packers.

One man may be mixing an expert dry Martini at the bar, while another is doing The New York Times crossword puzzle and popping a stick of gum in his mouth.

Suddenly, a woman shouts, "Stop" —and everyone gathers around to hear what she has to say. "Americans chew gum with their mouths open," she tells them, demonstrating.

The school is one of the most secret places in this most secretive country. We know it is in or near Moscow only because, every evening, the woman examiner returns to her apartment overlooking the Moskva River for dinner with her family.

In this school, Russians are trained for espionage work in the United States. In other schools, Russians are trained to spy in Britain and France—and probably in China and Western Germany, too. The training is good, judging by the success of one graduate, the Russian master spy who called himself Gordon Lonsdale and posed as a Canadian in London for several years before being caught.

One of the principal teachers in the American service is Melinda MacLean, Chicago-born wife of Donald MacLean, the British diplomat who defected to Russia with Guy Burgess in 1951.

Burgess died last year, a broken man. When Moscow had no more use for him, he was left to rot in a tiny flat. Even his car was taken from him. His health failed, and ultimately, according to friends, he lost the will to live.

Inside Soviet Russia, a Chicago-born woman is training her students for espionage in the United States

Run by an American

The destiny of Donald and Melinda MacLean has been different. They are not the attractive couple they were in the West. The MacLean I remembered from several meetings in Washington was a slim, confident man with craggy Scottish good looks and a quick, cool brain. Today he is fat from starchy food and puffy from alcohol, while Melinda is gray-haired and dowdy. Nevertheless, they are two mysterious influences in Russia.

MELINDA'S NEW LIFE as a servant of the Communists began 10 years ago, that of her husband three years earlier. In the late 1940s, MacLean was promoted from the British Embassy in Washington, to become the head of the American desk in the Foreign Office in London, a high diplomatic post. His wife was born Melinda Marling in Chicago on July 25, 1916, and grew up in Evanston, Ill. She was a first-generation American, her father, Francis Marling, having been born in England and brought to America as a child.

When Donald MacLean disappeared with Guy Burgess in the spring of 1951, Melinda remained in England with two children, Fergus and Donald, and a third on the way. For a year there was no clue to the whereabouts of the two diplomats, but experts believed they were in Russia.

Two years passed, and Soviet authorities still denied the diplomats were there. Melinda, now the mother of a third child, a daughter, filed for divorce. Her friends and relatives believed she would remain in England after the divorce or return to the United States. Then, after receiving a mysterious message in the spring of 1954, Melinda flew to Switzerland with her children and disappeared, too, behind a curtain of secrecy. Two years later the Soviets finally permitted Burgess and MacLean to appear at a press conference.

Burgess, who was holding down a minor post in the Foreign Languages Publishing House in Moscow, was a bloated wreck. His teeth had been knocked out by stilyagi (Russian delinquents) to whom he had made homosexual advances.

In some ways, MacLean was in even worse condition. He was teaching English in a dreary town—and hitting the bottle dangerously.

Melinda must have realized there was no going back, so she took her husband in hand and got him to cut down on his drinking. Within two years he was editor of International Affairs, a Soviet monthly. Today he is head of the English desk in the Foreign Office, with full access to Anglo-American publications, a car, and a large apartment. He also helps top officials with speeches and dreams up propaganda slogans. The slogan, "Better Red than dead," is believed to have originated with MacLean.

With Melinda as his guiding genius, he put all thoughts of England out of his mind and Russified both himself and his children. Melinda, too, needed an outlet for her energy. She could sometimes be seen shopping but fled whenever a Westerner stared at her. Her pretty face had become drawn and hard.

Finally, her big break came. The essence of spy training is attention to detail, since the slightest error can mean capture. It is Melinda's job to see that every detail is right. She travels daily to a house decorated in American style. There she changes out of her shapeless Russian clothes into an American dress, with nylon stockings and shoes with stiletto heels. Nothing "alien" is permitted. The coffee and cigarettes are American. The drinks are Scotch-on-the-rocks and cocktails. The students read American publications.

Melinda watches accents carefully, eliminating the long British "a," which comes more naturally to the Russian tongue in such words as "laugh" and "dance." She keeps up with new American trends and slang. She teaches students to eat with the fork in the right hand instead of the left, as is done in Europe, and reminds them that Americans remove their hats when a woman enters an elevator. She gets them to appreciate American dishes like breakfast cereals, bacon and eggs, and peanut butter.

BUT HER principal task is to teach them to efface themselves: to wear clothes that are neat without being too smart; to join no clubs, political or otherwise; and to avoid buying left-wing periodicals. It is around such minutiae that the FBI is able to build the image of a spy.

Melinda's salary probably is about 700 rubles ($770) a month, so the MacLeans have no financial worries.

But Moscow is a suffocating place where even dedicated Communists gasp for free air, and the MacLeans cannot get out. They may have traveled secretly to Western Europe, but even that became too dangerous a couple of years ago when Scotland Yard announced that Burgess and MacLean would be arrested if they were found. This put them at the mercy of Interpol. Donald MacLean snapped briefly that he had no intention of leaving, but friends of Burgess believe the Yard's announcement hastened his death.

Every evening, Melinda returns home to her Russianized children, now 20, 16, and 12 years old. And there is one small indication that she may regret it all. MacLean always has been addicted to drink. But in recent years, according to reports, Melinda has started drinking, too.

ACNE: THE NEEDLESS TORMENT OF YOUTH

It's a teen-age agony that can be treated by proper care —including care of the adolescent's "frame of mind"

By JAMES C. G. CONNIFF

TO THE AGONIZED teen-age question—How long does it take to outgrow the embarrassing blackheads, pimples, and blemishes of acne?—medical science now says: "Why wait?"

Skin specialists of the American Medical Association's Committee on Cutaneous Health and Cosmetics recently have put new emphasis on the scientific view that waiting to outgrow acne can be a serious mistake.

Why? Because acne, while it does not endanger life, disfigures young people just when they are beginning their social careers and are most sensitive about their looks. If acne is severe and goes untreated, it also can leave permanent scars.

Doctors stress that the first step in doing something about acne is to understand what it really is: a normal, minor, temporary failure of some parts of the skin to adjust as the internal-secretion glands, which manufacture the body's hormones, mature.

These endocrine glands play a big part in shaping personality, body build, manliness or womanliness, coloring and appearance, hair distribution, and much else. They are so powerful that, as the body responds to their awakening, it undergoes a temporary imbalance which most often shows up as excessive secretion from oil glands in the skin. The pores, which can handle only so much secretion at a time, become plugged. Result: the blackheads and pimples of acne.

One of the most interesting, and potentially most valuable, things to come to light about acne is the recent discovery that the teen-ager's "frame of mind" plays a major role in worsening the condition—and that he can do much to help clear it up.

How can emotions influence acne? Very much in the same way that emotion triggers skin response in the flush of embarrassment or that "goose pimples" are caused by fear or a sudden shock. The bio-electric surge with which the entire body reacts to emotional stimulus affects the skin also. And, in the teen-ager, this further intensifies the problems which the pores already have from blocked secretions caused by temporary hormonal imbalance.

SMALL WONDER that dermatologists find skin disorders caused by emotional upset the hardest type to cure. Medical science can generally soothe the skin condition itself, but before the eruption will disappear a doctor must find and eliminate the emotional disturbance, too.

Here, skin specialists point out, the young patient can do much to speed the clearing up of his own acne. Doctors recommend that teen-agers talk over their problems more freely with understanding teachers and school-guidance counsellors. Under the stimulus of medicine's "total therapy" concept (by which a patient's family and environment may be called upon to assist in his recovery), physicians also are urging families to lend more of a hand in helping their teen-agers through the difficult time when they are becoming self-reliant men and women.

"The mother who, at least once in a while, bites her tongue instead of reprimanding," said a veteran New York dermatologist, "may be pleasantly surprised to find she is doing as much for her teen-age daughter's complexion as she is for the girl's eventual emotional stability."

What positive steps can acne sufferers take to curb the condition—and even to head it off? Here are some recommendations of the American Medical Association:

1. A program of simple skin care—two or more thorough but gentle face washings daily with a good-quality soap and hot (but not too hot) water to cleanse without irritating.
2. Plenty of sleep at regular hours.
3. Lots of exercise (preferably outdoors), with a shower afterward.
4. Hair and scalp kept immaculate with a non-oily shampoo.
5. A healthier frame of mind, stemming from awareness that acne is not a disease or dirt but only a natural chemical change.

Isn't diet important? Yes, it is, although only a skin specialist can determine the kind of diet and the extent to which it will benefit the individual patient. The reason diet regulations may vary from case to case is that recent advances in endocrinology have demonstrated that acne is not basically a dietary disorder. But when an individual patient's skin condition becomes worse after eating certain foods, the doctor will, of course, recommend avoiding those foods.

If conscientious washing and diet fail to improve acne, medical attention should be sought in order to avoid permanent damage. Since each specialist has his own approach to the problem based on the needs of the individual, it is a mistake, says the AMA, to "assume that medicines and methods prescribed for a friend will be the best (or even the proper) treatment for you."

Removal of blackheads or opening of pimples is strictly a medical responsibility which, if attempted by the patient, may involve serious risk of pockmarks or infection.

But along with conscientious washing and diet, don't forget that all-important new "frame of mind" factor. Skin authorities assure teen-agers that people—even their contemporaries—are not nearly so critical as a young person is of his own appearance.

Along with daily skin care, the adolescent who cultivates a pleasant personality and a well-groomed look will find that acne will cease to be a handicap all the more quickly.

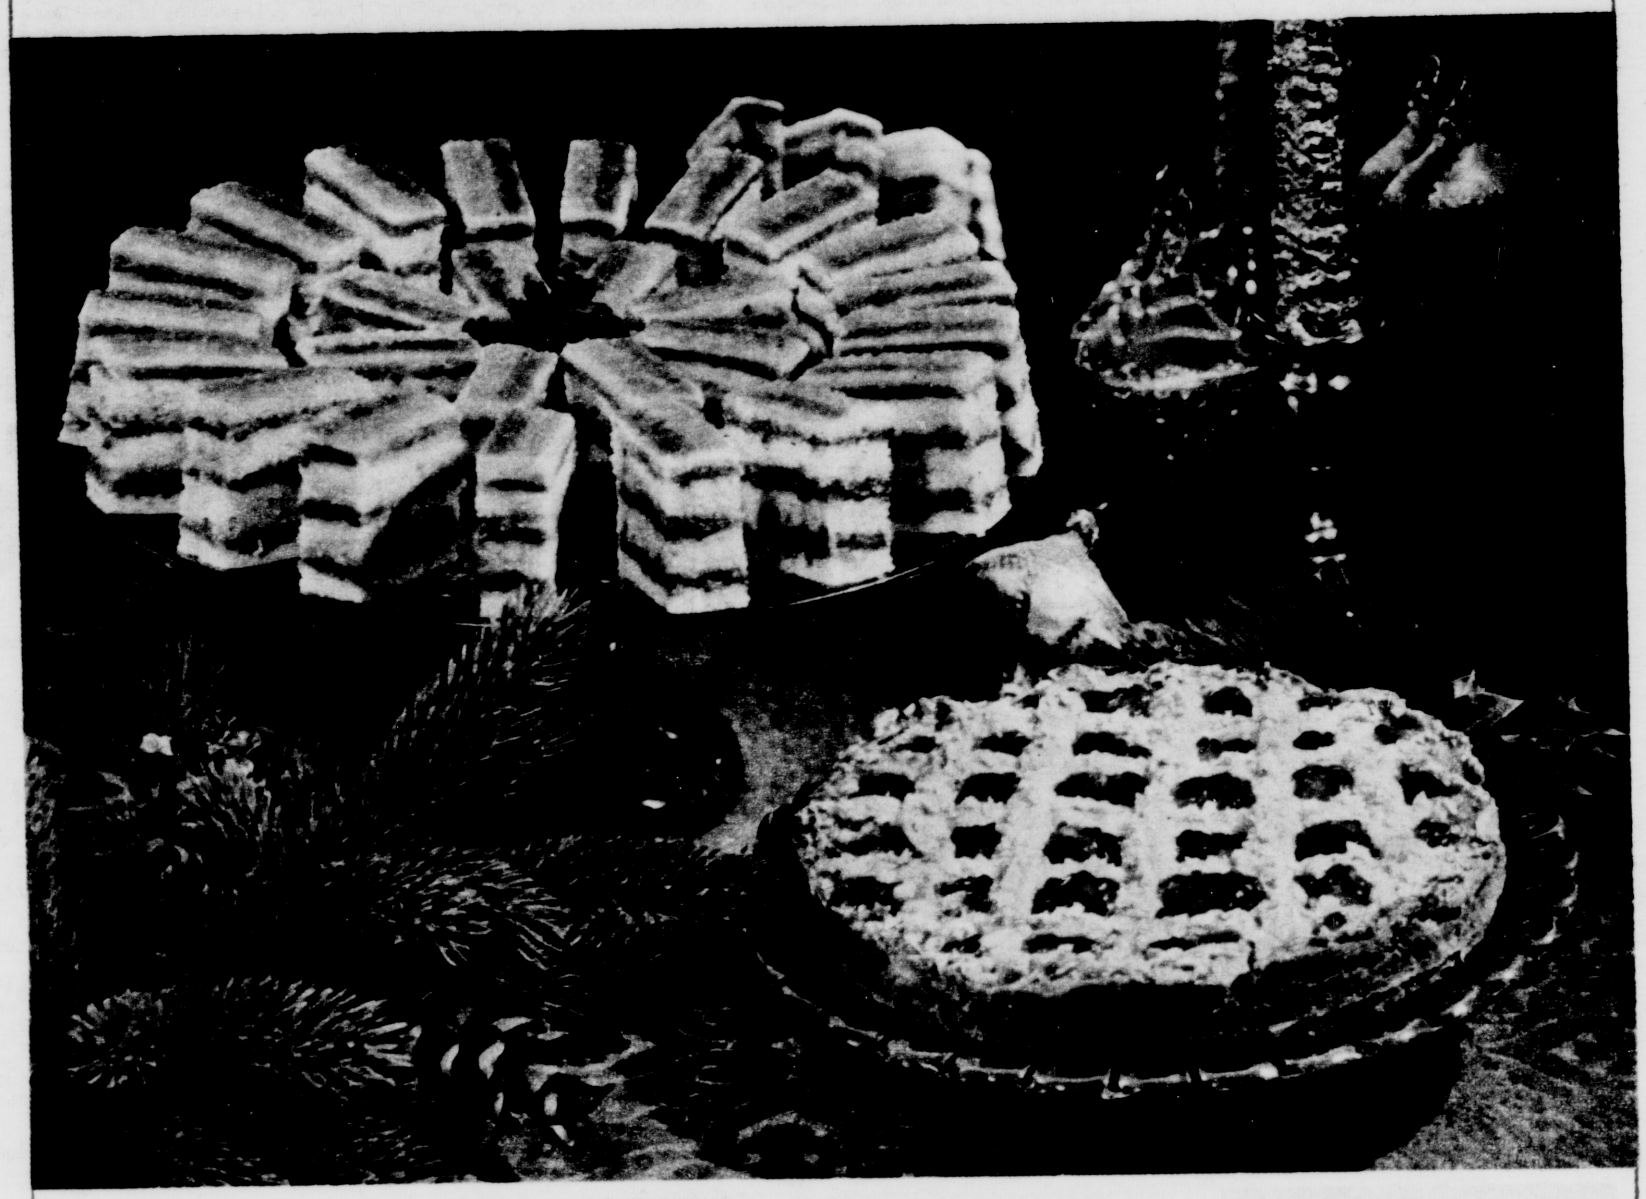
Christmas Baking to Remember...



Out of the Old World past, bring the delight of holiday baking to your modern Christmas table

Viennese Ribbon Cake

Rich layers of jam and cake—an elegant holiday cookie reminiscent of Vienna.

1 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup sugar
4 eggs
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups dairy sour cream
½ cup finely chopped pecans
6 tablespoons red raspberry jam
¼ cup apricot jam
Creamy Frosting (see recipe)

1. Invert a 15½x10½x1-in. pan; grease and flour the bottom.

2. Cream the butter or margarine with the extract. Gradually add the sugar, creaming until fluffy after each addition. Add the eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Mix in the flour and salt.

3. Spread one-third of the batter on the prepared pan. Spread evenly to ½ in. from edge of pan.

4. Bake at 350°F about 10 min. Remove from oven and carefully cut layer in half crosswise, forming 2 layers; remove to rack.

5. Repeat twice with the remaining batter, making a total of 6 thin layers. (Wash, grease, and flour pan before each baking.)

6. Mix the sour cream and pecans together. Place one cake layer, top-side up, on a cutting board. Spread evenly with about ¼ cup of the sour cream mixture. Then spread with about 2 tablespoons of the red raspberry jam.

7. Add a second cake layer and spread with ¼ cup sour cream mixture and 2 tablespoons apricot jam. Repeat with remaining layers, leaving the top plain. Place a board on top to compress the layers; chill overnight.

8. Trim off crust edges and spread top with Creamy Frosting. Lightly sprinkle with colored decorators' sugar. Cut crosswise into 12 strips, about ¾ in. wide; cut each strip into fourths.

48 ribbon cakes

Creamy Frosting

Combine 2 tablespoons soft butter or margarine, 2 teaspoons cream, a few grains salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla extract, and 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar. Mix until smooth and creamy.

Linzer Torte

An Austrian pastry delight—buttery almond pastry complemented by tart currant jelly.

1 cup flour
¾ cup finely chopped almonds (reserve 2 tablespoons for topping)
1 cup confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
1 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 egg
½ cup red currant jelly
1 egg, slightly beaten

1. Mix the flour, ½ cup plus 2 tablespoons almonds, sugar, spices, lemon peel, butter or margarine, and egg together until dough forms a ball. Refrigerate dough several hours, or until very firm.

2. Remove bowl of dough from refrigerator and set over ice and water. Press ⅔ of the dough onto bottom of an ungreased 8-in. spring-form pan or an 8-in. round layer cake pan. Spread evenly with jelly.

3. With the remaining dough, make ten 8-in. rolls the thickness of a pencil and one roll ½ in. thick and 27 in. long. (Flour hands and rolling surface generously with flour since dough softens quickly when handled.) Place small rolls crisscross on top of jelly to form a lattice design. Place the one long roll around top edge of torte; brush lattice with beaten egg. Sprinkle with the remaining chopped almonds.

4. Bake at 375°F 40 min., or until torte is a golden brown.

5. Set torte on cooling rack. If baking in a spring-form pan, let torte cool in pan 10 min. Remove the rim from the pan and continue cooling torte to room temperature. Cut torte away from pan bottom and slide off with a spatula onto serving plate. If baking in a layer cake pan, let torte cool 10 min.; run knife around edge of pan to loosen. Cool completely. Turn out onto cloth-covered cooling rack; with another rack, turn cake right-side up. If desired, garnish with a border of whipped cream.

Czechoslovakian Braid

(Vanochka)

A charming Old World favorite also typical of Hungary, Yugoslavia, and Poland.

- ¾ cup milk, scalded
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 pkgs. active dry yeast
- ½ cup warm water, 110° to 115°F
- 5 cups flour
- 2 eggs
- 1 tablespoon vanilla extract
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
- ½ cup seedless raisins
- ½ cup blanched almonds, toasted and coarsely chopped

1. Pour the scalded milk over butter or margarine, sugar, and salt in a mixing bowl; set aside to cool to lukewarm.

2. Sprinkle the yeast over warm water; let stand 5 to 10 min.

3. Add about ¾ cup flour to milk mixture and beat vigorously until smooth. Stir the yeast and add to the batter, mixing well. Add about one-half the remaining flour and beat until smooth.

4. Beat the eggs with the extract and lemon peel and mix into the batter. Blend in the raisins and almonds. Beat in enough remaining flour to make a soft dough.

5. Turn dough onto a lightly floured surface and let stand 5 to 10 min. Knead until smooth. Form dough into a ball and put into a greased bowl. Turn dough to bring greased surface to top. Cover and let rise in warm place (about 80°F) until doubled. Punch dough down, pull edges in to center, and turn dough completely over in bowl. Cover and let rise until nearly doubled.

6. Turn dough onto a floured surface and divide into nine equal portions. Roll each portion into a 15-in. rope-shaped piece. Braid four pieces together; join the ends and place on greased baking sheet. Braid three of the remaining pieces together; join ends and place on top of the first braid. Twist remaining pieces together and lay on top of second braid.

7. Brush with beaten egg and let rise until doubled, about 45 min.

8. Bake at 350°F 45 to 50 min., or until golden brown. Cool and, if desired, drizzle with a thin confectioners' sugar icing and sprinkle chopped almonds over top.

JACK HAWKINS: ACTOR ON THE GO

This transatlantic film star has found travel broadening—

but it also has complicated his life By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

JACK HAWKINS has lived out of a suitcase for 36 of his 54 years. Travel has helped make him one of the best-known and best-loved actors on either side of the Atlantic. It also caused his separation from his first wife and led him to meet his second wife.

His propensity for travel also is responsible for a clause in all his recent contracts stipulating that his wife Doreen be with him on location, no matter how far away.

"It was really her idea," he admitted with a smile when we met for lunch at the Pickwick Club in London during a day off from filming "Lord Jim," in which he costars with Peter O'Toole. "I still don't know whether it's because she likes traveling as much as I do or because she doesn't trust me!"

With such films as "Lawrence of Arabia," "Ben-Hur," and "The Bridge on the River Kwai" to his credit, Hawkins today is one of the few truly international stars in show business. Yet few of his most ardent admirers know that the London-born actor, son of a prosperous public-works contractor, got into his profession by singing in a church choir!

Friends impressed by his voice introduced him to Italia Conti, principal of a school for young actors. Conti promptly cast him in a minor role in a musical, "Where the Rainbow Ends."

Jack was barely 13 when he auditioned for George Bernard Shaw, who was casting "St. Joan," and got the part of a page. At 18 he sailed for New York and a costarring role on Broadway in "Journey's End."

Fifteen months later he was back in England playing a featured role in "Beau Geste," which starred Laurence Olivier. For the next 10 years he appeared in a variety of stage plays, ranging from Shakespeare to contemporary comedy, and got a few small parts in films.

"In those days," he recalled wryly, "the older actors were the film stars. Today young men get top billing. I always seem to be living in the wrong decade."

In 1933 he married Jessica Tandy, and a year later he became the father of a daughter. The marriage lasted six years.

"She went to the United States; I remained in England and volunteered for the army. The separation just didn't work."

Hawkins is seaward bound in film, "Lord Jim."

Hawkins joined the Royal Welsh Fusiliers in 1939. Five months later he was commissioned a captain and ended up a full colonel.

As Special Service officer, he had charge of troop entertainment in India and Southeast Asia. While stationed in Burma in 1945, he met a beautiful young actress, Doreen Lawrence, and directed her in several of his productions. Two years later, back in London, they were married.

Doreen gave up her career and happily concentrated on her husband, their suburban home, and their three children: Nick, now 16; Andrew, 14; and Caroline, 10.

Hawkins was on location when two of them were born.

"I never will forget how I learned about Andrew's birth," he told me. "I was on location in a remote African village in northern Natal. It was so isolated, I had to ride horseback the last few miles to get there. Just as I approached the rustic lodge that was to be my home for a year, the proprietress ran up waving a message she had received over the short-wave radio. It announced the birth of my son."

Before he agreed to play the part of Marlow in Columbia's "Lord Jim," Hawkins insisted on a clause in his contract that assured him of spending Christmas with his family in England.

TO LOOK AT Jack's powerfully built frame and bulldoglike face and feel his strong handshake, it is hard to imagine that a couple of years ago he had such a severe throat ailment that he wasn't sure he'd pull through. Typically, when he was barely well enough to do so, he flew to southern Italy to recuperate.

Ever since his recovery, he has been driven by an incredible urge to work, to make money, to use every moment of his time.

When the "Lord Jim" company returned to London for interiors, he simultaneously started work in a second film, "Guns at Batasi," for 20th Century-Fox, signed for three more films, and was looking for properties for his own company.

Hawkins realizes that his frequent absences from home make his role as a parent a secondary one. "But that's not so unusual," he insists. "It seems natural for young children to find more comfort and security with their mother. Perhaps before long I'll be able to spend more time with my family. As for Doreen, I know I am first with her, and if a man is convinced of this, nothing else matters."

As the BBC report came in over the radio, I was speechless with relief.

pense of most of Europe enslaved by the Nazis. And once Hitler had consolidated his conquests and then probably pushed into Russia and the Balkans, Great Britain would be at his mercy.

Still, less than two years before, I had seen the British, then under Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, surrender abjectly at Munich to Hitler at the expense of the Czechs. The British people had applauded their leader. Churchill, one knew, was of a considerably different stripe, but the people were the same. The war had gone badly. Their Allies had surrendered. Alone, they could not hope to defeat Germany. And if they continued the war, they knew their great cities would be destroyed by the German Luftwaffe.

My feelings as I returned from Compiègne to Berlin that midsummer of 1940 were that the British probably would opt for peace. It was understandable. No doubt my feelings were swayed by what I heard in Berlin. Every German I talked to, in the army, government, Nazi party, in the street, was absolutely certain that Britain would accept Hitler's expected offer of peace.

I thought I knew the consequences. Hitler would have got away with his military aggression. He would rule most of the European continent—and with an iron hand. A long dark age would set in in the Western World. We would suffer from it, too, in America. Britain at this moment offered the only hope that history might still take a better turn for the future. It was, I felt, a slight hope.

It was against this background and in this mood that on the evening of July 19, 1940, I walked over from my hotel to the Kroll Opera, where the rubber-stamp Reichstag was meeting to hear a speech by Adolf Hitler. In the Wilhelmstrasse that day there was little doubt that the dictator would offer peace to Britain. A host of generals, who crowded the lobby of the Adlon Hotel, where I lived, said the same thing. They were in a jovial, expansive mood.

AS I LEFT THEM to walk over to the Reichstag, I was in the opposite mood. It seemed to me to mark the end of the world, at least to the kind of world I thought fit to live in. After all, as someone in America had written, the "wave of the future" apparently belonged to the Nazis. The barbarians had taken over.

After Hitler's speech to the Reichstag, I would have to hurry out to the radio station and make my daily late broadcast to CBS in America. I did not relish the thought. If I showed my despair, the censors would cut me off the air.

As expected, Hitler did offer peace that evening. Worse, from my viewpoint, he made his proposal sound magnanimous and perfectly reasonable. I had heard all of his great Reichstag speeches down the years, but this, I had to admit, was one of his best.

As I listened, I knew it would convince the German people and a good part of the neutral world—perhaps even the British people themselves, for Hitler cleverly tried to drive a wedge between them and their political leaders, above all, Winston Churchill. Hitler said in part:

"In this hour I feel it to be my duty . . . to appeal once more to reason and common sense in Great Britain as much as elsewhere. I consider myself in a position to make this appeal since I am not the vanquished begging favors but the victor speaking in the name of reason. I can see no reason why this war must go on."

Hitler was not more specific than that. But was it not enough?

With these words ringing in my ears, I walked part way up the Tiergarten and then hailed a taxi to the German Broadcasting House. I had hardly sat down at the typewriter before some impulse moved me to turn on the radio to hear what the BBC in London had to say. It would be much too early, I was sure, to have any British reaction to Hitler's offer of peace. That would be something for the Prime Minister and his cabinet to mull over—and that might take days.

How wonderfully wrong I was! This particular broadcast from London was being made in German—but no matter. Its message was a resounding "No" to Hitler. The BBC was very emphatic. Its speaker heaped ridicule on Hitler's very utterance. There could be no peace with Britain as long as Hitler held his booted heel upon the prostrate bodies of once-free European nations.

I was speechless with relief and joy. A number of German officials and military officers had come in to listen to the BBC. Their faces fell. They could not believe their ears. "Can you understand these British fools? Turning down peace now? They're crazy!"

Maybe. But crazy in a way that gave me one of the most inspiring moments of my life. This time the British would not give up. There was still hope that our Western World would not accept the dark night of Nazi savagery. In one of the lowest moments of their proud history the British had shown the courage that lights the way toward a decent life for mankind.

FOR MANY YEARS I wondered how the BBC in London could have broadcast so quickly what seemed to be a momentous and crucial decision of the government (the answer came within an hour after Hitler had finished speaking). His speech had been broadcast, and London, we knew, would be picking it up. But then it would have to be translated and the British cabinet would have to meet to deliberate on it. This would take hours and probably days. How had the British Prime Minister been able to answer so swiftly?

Churchill gave the answer many years later in his memoirs. The BBC, he said, didn't wait for his decision. Everyone in Great Britain knew what the answer would be. The BBC, said Churchill, made the announcement "without any prompting from His Majesty's Government, as soon as Hitler's speech was heard over the radio."

The Prime Minister himself never bothered to reply to Hitler's proposal.
